Kline's homebred Holstein earns top honors

Here are the champions from the annual Lancaster County Holstein Show, Thursday. Top honors went to Russel L. Kline of R2 Denver. His entry, 4-year-old Vern Lee Tidy Win, was a homebred Holstein. Reserve Champion honors went to Joyce Blank of Kinzers with her 3-year-old Holstein, Con-Noll Marvex Jo, bred by Joyce's father Nathan Stoltzfus of Gap. From left are, Gail Ginder, alternate dairy princess; JoAnn Brenneman, alternate dairy princess; Joyce Blank; Russel L. Kline; Judge Obie Snider; and LuAnn Brenneman, Lancaster County dairy princess.

QUARRYVILLE — A 4-year-old cow, bred and showed by Russel L. Kline of R2 Denver, emerged from the showring with Grand Champion honors against competition of almost 180 entries, at the annual Lancaster County Holstein Show, Thursday.

Vern Lee Tidy Win is the first homebred animal in three year to win the event.

Kline, who milks about 50 cows on his Holstein operation, said Tidy Win scored VG-88 with a test of 106.3 and has scored over 100 pounds consecutively for three months. She has been projected in her third year of milking at 23,000 with 1,000 pounds of butterfat.

Kline, who had Tidy Win entered in the same event last year, said she will be sold at the Pennsylvania All-American Sale in September.

Tidy Win's dam is Lady-Y-Run Tidy Glory and the sire is Coyuga-Inlet Kennedy Win.

After receiving his Grand Champion trophy, Kline admitted, "I thought she'd do well," then added, "but I had no idea what she'd do."

Reserve Champion honors went to Clifford and Joyce Blank of Kinzers.

Joyce, 22, who showed 3-year-old Con-Noll Marvex Jo to reserve honors, said she received the same title at this event last year but with a different Holstein. She has been showing since she was nine year old.

The Blanks have rented a farm in Kinzers since June of 1981 which was previously operated by Clifford's uncle, Jacob Kreider. They milk about 30 registered Holsteins. (Story on Blanks' Smiling Holsteins, Lancaster Farming July 17 issue.)

Marvex Jo freshened in April and has a record of about 16,000, according to Joyce. This new reserve champion and about 20

Block announces '83 wheat program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Farmers learned the answer to the nagging question "What does Secretary Block plan to do with the 1983 wheat program?" last Wednesday. That was the day Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block made public his decision for a 20 percent acreage reduction program for 1983 crop wheat and advance wheat deficiency payments to those farmers who participate in the program.

His announcement drew strong criticism from Farm Bureau's Robert Delano who termed it the least effective option for providing the incentive farmers need to cut back on grain production.

And, on the same day as Block's announcement, Congressman Berkley Bedell of Iowa introduced a 1983 acreage diversion bill designed to give farmers more incentive to reduce grain acres an additional 10 percent with a $2 per bushel payment for wheat.

In announcing the USDA 1983 wheat program, Block said confidently, "The reduced acreage program should strengthen wheat prices by limiting next year's harvest and the buildup of stocks. At the same time, the program will increase long-term conservation on wheat land.

"Participation is voluntary, but only those farmers who enter the program will be eligible for price support loans, target price protection and eligibility for the farmer-owned grain reserve."

Block also said the U.S. Department of Agriculture is intensifying its wheat export efforts and expanding its export credit sales program. (See related story, Exports are linchpin . . .)

Block announced additional credit financing under the export credit guarantee (GSM 102) program. This will expand credit to countries buying U.S. farm products. The additional authorization of $300 million will increase the program's level to $2.8 billion from the currently authorized $2.5 billion.

While high interest rates have discouraged the use of guaranteed loan programs this year, this

Steele wins nat'l marketing award

BY SHEILA MILLER

HERSHEY — Chester County dairy farmer and Agway chairman George Steele admits he is "rarely at a loss for words." But Thursday evening, Steele, who was serving as master of ceremonies for the final meeting of the National Agricultural Marketing Officials, suddenly found himself speechless.

In what Steele termed a "truly sneaky" approach, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's marketing officer James Sumner and fellow NAMO members from 41 states (including Alaska and Hawaii) surprised Steele by presenting him with their annual award.

In one of his last official acts as the organization's president, Ken Meier of Oregon congratulated Steele for his achievements as "an outstanding spokesman for agriculture."

"He has helped bridge the communication gap between the farm and nonfarm communities throughout the nation," said Meier. "He combines the rare gifts of intelligence, depth of knowledge, and sincerity in his work with an ability to stimulate large and small audiences to action."

Steele, who has been in the dairy business most of his life, continues in the operation of a family dairy farm, milking 100 cows with another 100 head of young stock. But over the years, he has combined his farming career with community and industry service.

For 18 years, Steele served as one of his township's supervisors. He also was vice chairman of the board of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Cooperative Association from 1963-64, and was a member of that association for 11 years, along with his local Chester-Delaware association.

After Pa. Farm Bureau became part of Agway in 1965, Steele served as vice chairman in 1971 and was elected chairman in 1972.

"As chairman of the board of Agway, he has helped preserve the markets of many dairy farmers in the Northeast," added Meier. "He has led Agway to become a giant marketing co-op that services,

Agway chairman and dairy farmer George Steele, second from right, received the annual award presented by the National Agricultural Marketing Officers. Pennsylvania's marketing officer, Jim Sumner, right, hosted the event held in Hershey this week. Gail Danilson, left, of Iowa became the new NAMO president, succeeding Ken Meier of Oregon. Speaking at the groups final session Thursday evening was Sperry New Holland's Walt Buescher, center.

LITITZ — If you think farmers have nothing to smile about these days, it's time you get to know Otis. This lovable, bib-overalled farmer has joined Lancaster Farming and each week will be sharing his down-to-earth views about agriculture with you.

Otis gets his somewhat-biased opinions on farming from talented cartoonist Dave Carpenter of Emmetsburg, Iowa.

Low Butterfat Test? You need new Pennfield Fat Booster Pellets.

Lower fat tests can be the result of a number of factors. Like hot, humid weather. Grazing lush pastures. Rations high in grain, and low in forage. Low fiber intake. Or high moisture forages.

Dairy research of leading universities has shown that feeding sodium bicarbonate and magnesium oxide can IMPROVE BUTTERFAT TESTS.

The biggest problem with using a buffer is getting your cows to eat it. Pennfield has the answer...a new feed with a buffer to combat the conditions that are lowering your butterfat.

Pennfield Fat Booster Pellets

Pennfield's nutritionists have developed a highly palatable feed to be fed at the rate of 2 pounds per head per day to assure your cows the proper rate of buffering. Call your Pennfield dairy specialist today for details. . . and make the move to improved butterfat tests.

The right medicine?

It was bound to happen.

Actually, it comes as no surprise.

So then why does it make us so angry to learn that the minute a national help-program for farmers is announced, consumer groups across the nation raise their united voices in protest?

True, the 1983 wheat program announced by U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block last week has some shortcomings even in the eyes of most farm groups; but it does offer some relief to those of us who are already feeling the economic crunch of another record wheat crop.

With less money in the bank from this year's harvest, a September acreage-diversion payment may be the ticket many farmers need to stay in business at least one more year. But, the payment certainly won't be the free ride consumer groups are shouting about.

It seems a bit unfair that 99 percent of the farm community can sympathize with these consumer advocates who carry the torch to hold down prices. What farmer wouldn't be tickled if the price of cars, gasoline, and other merchandise would hold steady or even drop during a year's time? Unfortunately, that doesn't seem to be as much the case for these items as for farm commodities.

As U.S. House Ag Committee Chairman E. Kika de la Garza says, it's not the farmer's responsibility to subsidize the American home. But, hasn't that been the case for decades?

Last week I had the opportunity to chat with a New York City native who was attending a leadership convention in Hershey. To my surprise, this labor union leader was quite knowledgable about the current farm dilemma. His farm "education," he said, was learned through the television media.

Although he could not confess to being sympathetic, he was aware that farmers were going out of business and as a result farm equipment dealers, feed companies, and other agri-businesses were suffering from the ripple effects. And, this labor leader had the cause for this economic turmoil all figured out. Like other businesses, he realized agriculture was feeling the impact of too-high interest rates.

Knowing what caused the problem for farmers, however, didn't change this man's feelings about food prices. When asked if he felt city dwellers would be more willing to accept higher food prices if it meant keeping farmers in business, he just smiled.

With a shrug of his shoulders and a lift of his hands, he answered, "Why should they care. Most everyone doesn't think food originates any further away than their corner supermarket. They don't worry how it got into the can or carton; just so it's on the shelf when they need it."

As far as their willingness to pay more for food, this Teamster leader said city consumers would be willing to pay more for food only if they earned more money — so that groceries wouldn't take a bigger bite out of their budgets.

"If they get a raise, they don't mind seeing the farmer get one too. But, if they see the farmer getting more money and they are getting less, they'll condemn the farmers. They'll think the farmers are holding back food to drive up prices. They won't think any further than that."

To say farmers are caught between a rock and a hard place is quite an understatement. We need higher prices for our products in order to stay in business — growing costs keep going up. But the minute steps are taken to add a few coins to a farmer's income, the population masses rebel. And we all know whose voices carry the most weight behind them in our nation's capital — not the farm organizations' who represent the meager three percent of the nation that feeds and clothes the protestors.

It's interesting to hear how city-folks feel about farmers. Through our brief tete-a-tete, this New Yorker and I both came away from the conversation with a better insight into each other's situation. But, it also pointed out how vast a separation there is between city and country, and how wide a communication gap exists.

As this particular person stated, his knowledge of the farming situation was learned, correctly or incorrectly, through information broadcast by television. It's imperative that farmers and their organization representatives stop talking to themselves and instead make sure their city cousins are getting the true story of agriculture.

The story about the farmer, which usually ends up with a not-so-funny punch line, can no longer afford to be the butt of jokes shared at dinner or in the office. Although it may not make the most exciting newscast transmitted into our urban neighbors' homes, the real-life saga of farmers and their committment to the land may be just the right medicine for making higher food prices easier to swallow.

THE JAILOR SAVED BY HIS PRISONER

July 25, 1982

Background Scripture: Acts 16:6-40

Devotional Reading: Acts 28:16-28

In the New Testament and in the years that followed in the life of the early church, Christians often found themselves imprisoned for openly following and teaching Jesus Christ. If you'll read these various passages in the New Testament, you'll note that Christian prisoners usually were unique, to say the least. They weren't like other prisoners. In fact, although these men were physically confined to a jail, thee was a lingering apprehension among their jailors that it was the prisoners who seemed to be the free men.

The Prisoners Were Listening

That's the way it was with Paul and Silas at Philippi (Acts 16). Having been beaten and hauled before the magistrates upon thier arrival in Philippi, Paul and Silas were put in jail. One would have expected the prisoners to be either discouraged or humiliated, perhaps even both. Instead in the midnight stillness of the prison there was heard these two men praying and singing hymns. What's more, we're told, "and the prisoners were listening to them."

Suddenly there is an earthquake and both the prisoners' fetters and cell door are sprung open. Waking with a start, the jailor jumped to the conclusion that the earthquake had made it possible for Paul and Silas to escape. The thought of his prisoners having escaped devastates him. Some commentators think that his despair arose from the fact that the town magistrates would execute him for allowing the prisoners to escape. Others lay his extreme reaction to his sense of humiliation. His pride was crushed.

Whatever his reason, the jailor soon finds himself —where we sometimes find ourselves: he is overwhelmed with despair, he finds himself unable to cope with his situation, and he comes perilously close to giving up and calling it a day.

What Must I Do?

It is in this crucial moment that he hears Paul calling loudly to him: "Do not harm yourself, for we are all here." In amazement, he calls for lights and finds that, in truth, his prisoners are waiting quietly within the jail. It is a picture of contrasts: on the one hand he is scared and desperate; on the other, even though he is the jailor, it is Peter and Silas who seem to be in control. "Men," he asks desperately, "what must I do to be saved?" The jailor needs the help of his prisoner.

How often you and I find ourselves either frightened or in deepest despair and we turn to God to ask what we must do to be saved. Whether our danger is physical or spiritual, we want to be redeemed of all this. It seems we just can't go on one more hour, that we have reached the end of our faith, that nothing is working out the way it's supposed to.

But the answer is as simple and complex as it has ever been: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and you will be saved."

To Control Canada Thistle

Canada Thistle is listed as a noxious weed in Pennsylvania; this means they should be controlled and not allowed to go to seed. Too often we see what some people call "summer snow flakes" floating through the air. These are not snow flakes but thistle seeds. We should insist that these be mowed or sprayed to prevent seed formation.

Most townships have noxious weed ordinances to prevent the spread from farm to farm, of Canada thistles and other noxious weeds. These ordinances should be enforced for the best interest of all farmers. You can spot spray with Banvel for control. Be sure to follow all label instructions. We urge everyone to do something about this problem.

To Control Erosion

We were blessed with timely rains this spring and early summer, but some of the rains have been very heavy and created considerable run-off. It emphasized the need for terraces, contours and strips to control these large amounts of water.

The use of diversion ditches and sodded waterways above the area to be protected should be considered.

When surface water is not controlled around the premises we also have the added danger of surface water entering our well supplies; this can cause the water to be unfit for human consumption, and in some cases, increases the nitrate content of the water supply. We need to be concerned with controlling these large amounts of water on the land and around farm buildings.

For Hot Weather Feedbunk Management

During hot weather, nature often works against you in getting rapid, efficient gains, reminds Chester D. Hughes, Extension Livestock Agent. This is usually the result of soured, moldy or overheated feed and dirty water. Some special precautions will help those cattle gaining.

(1) Clean bunks at least twice per week. More often if moldy feed is observed.

(2) Be sure you are feeding enough silage or high moisture grain each day to prevent spoilage. Ammonia-treated silage has longer bunk life before heating and molding.

(3) Regulate feed offered so that feed is not allowed to accumulate in the bunks.

(4) Feed two or three times per day rather than only once.

(5) Feed early in morning and late in day. Avoid the hot early afternoon.

(6) Clean watering devices at least once each week.

To Consider Early Castration of Foals

Early castrations in ponies, even at 10 days of age have been done successfully and is a good practice for these reasons:

(1) Less distress and trauma to the animal.

(2) Easier to handle at this age.

(3) Quicker recovery from the surgery, with fewer post surgical complications. (The mare exercises the foal and supplies moral support).

(4) Thefoal develops into a more cooperative and evenly proportioned animal.

The only disadvantage is that they must always be done by the closed method, as many young foals seem to have very large inguinal rings.

You should discuss early castration with your veterinarian for proper surgical procedures, urges Chester D. Hughes, Extension Livestock Agent.

Thursday, July 22
Report Supplied by USDA

CATTLE: Through midweek slaughter steers and heifers 1.00-1.50 lower. Cows 1.00-1.50 lower. Bulls steady.

A bearish trade led the fed cattle market lower through the week, in spite of very modest day-to-day receipts. Although many buyers exhibited a need for additional live inventory, most operated cautiously and were very selective in their purchases. Continued large discounts on good grade and light weight carcasses in the dressed trade forced similar reductions on their live counterparts. However, some price support was afforded good to low Choice steers, 950-1050 lbs. by purchases for return to feedlots; a situation not apparent locally in some time.

Steers made up 49 percent of the week's receipts: Heifers 37 percent, cows 7 percent, feeder 5 percent. Four day receipts 7856, last week 8741, a year ago 11.

STEERS: Earlier in week 9 loads Choice few Prime 2-4 1125-1250 lbs. 67.50-67.75, 1 load 68.50. At the close Choice 2-4 1050-1225 lbs. 65.50-66.50, 3 loads 67.00-67.25. Mixed Good and Choice 2-3 1000-1150 lbs. 64.00-65.50. Few goods 63.00-64.00.

HEIFERS: Earlier in week several loads Choice and few Prime 950-1050 lbs. 65.25-65.50. At the close Choice 2-4 925-1025 lbs. 63.00-64.50, part load 65.00. Mixed Good and Choice 2-3 900-1025 lbs. 61.00-63.00. Few Good 59.00-61.00.

Average of 15 214 detailed quotations for Choice 900-1100 lb. steers 65.85; 1100-1300 lbs. 66.95. Average cost steers 65.73, average weight 1108 lbs. as compared 66.47 and 1115 lbs. a week ago. Average cost heifers 63.13, average weight 986 lbs., as compared 64.11 and 964 lbs. a week ago.

COWS: High Cutter, Utility and Commercial 1-3 40.50-42.00, Some High Dressing to 43.00. Cutter 39.00-40.50. Canner and low Cutter 37.00-39.00.

BULLS: 1-2 1100-1800 lbs. 48.00-52.00, Few high dressing 53.00-54.00.

FEEDERS: Medium Frame 1 steers in good to low Choice slaughter flesy 950-1050 lbs. 64.00-64.50.

Peach canker increases economic damage to fruit growers

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Staff Correspondent

BIGLERVILLE — A shortened tree life and the loss of one-third to one-half of the tree's fruit is a conservative estimate of the economic impact caused by cytospora canker, according to Kenneth Hickey, professor of Plant Pathology of the Penn State Fruit Research Lab, Biglerville.

These losses aren't limited to growers, however. Hickey added that research is finding more canker starting in nursery stock that has experienced extreme winter damage its first year.

Planting this stock costs growers a full growing season since orchards must be pulled up and restarted. It costs nurserymen sales and growing time which can be economically devastating to their business.

According to Hickey, cytopora canker or peach canker, affects all stonefruits, but has its greatest impact on peaches. The disease has been identified for at least 20 years, but it was relatively inactive in Pennsylvania until about 5 years ago.

Canker is a fungus disease which invades dead or injured tissue. Although it is not a rapid killer, it cuts down the tree's productivity and shortens a possible 15 year lifespan to three to four years after invasion of the fungus. Hickey explained the severe winter injury caused by cold damage to the bark of trees over the last three years has made the peach trees in the state much more susceptible to the disease.

Penn State researchers, under the direction of James Travis, Penn State Extension, and in cooperation with Hickey, are now completing studies for surgically removing diseased canker tissue from trees. Hickey noted that the surgical technique is not new; but finding the exact fungicides to be used with the removal is what has to be perfected.

Hickey added researchers had to work directly with growers on determining the economic feasibility of the technique. Stated Hickey, "This is something that the growers themselves will be able to perform. Progressive growers are looking for anything that will get them out of this. We questioned whether the growers would be willing to take the time to do this, because it is a lot of work. But, the growers have said that the price of not doing it is too high."

Hickey explained the purpose of the Fruit Lab's research was to determine if the disease could be eradicated by surgically removing the canker, treating the tree with a fungicidal disinfectant, and covering it to allow healing. The fungicide and the wound dressing used are readily available to growers.

According to Hickey, the success of the operation depends on: the age and vigor of the tree; the time of year that the surgery is done, preferably only in the spring and early summer; and if the tree has most of the growing season to heal. Hickey stated that trees operated on by June have healed in a couple of weeks.

Hickey stated that the technique should not be used on trees that are less than two years old or more than twelve years since the possibility of saving those trees for any productive time is minimal. These infected orchards should be removed. The target trees are those reaching peak maturity and productivity from five to twelve years of age.

Hickey indicated the severity of winters, the varieties of peaches being grown for marketability rather than for adaptability to the area, and the way growers now raise peaches have all contributed to the canker problem. He expressed hopes through demonstrations and educational programs growers will "get back on the right track" in preparing their trees for winter and thereby avoid increasing canker damage.

Pa. Ayrshire presents production, judging awards

UNIVERSITY PARK — Presentation of production and judging awards and a $500 check toward the Ag Arena Fund highlighted the Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders Association Field Day last Saturday at Penn State.

The Ag Arena contribution was made by J. Garrett Hunter, Association president; and Milt Brubaker, secretary, to Paul Wangness, head of the Dairy Science Department.

Following assembly at the University cow barns and registration, the group was welcomed by Earl Kesler, professor of dairy science.

A slide presentation on artificial insemination practices was presented by Phillip Senger, of the Dairy Breeding Center staff, and Mrs. Jana Peters, who is working toward her Master's Degree in Dairy Science.

They explained that their study shows a calving rate difference of 15.7 percent was recorded between the 18 lowest and 18 highest technicians surveyed. The two main problems encountered were difficulty in determining the proper location to deposit the semen and depositing the entire insemination within the correct organ. Evaluation of insemination techniques was done through an x-ray or radiographic method.

The field day also included a tour of the new DHI Center and research being conducted on calf barns.

The high production herds for butterfat cited in the state were:

Androssan Farms, Villanova, 114 cows, 17,937M, 4.14 percent, 744F; Heindel Farms, Womelsdorf, 29 cows, 15,099M, 4.22 percent, 637F; Harold G. Shelly, Manheim, 18 cows, 15,450M, 3.92 percent, 606F; James W. Martin, Stevens, 45 cows, 14,595M, 4.12 percent, 601F; Charles H. Gable, Elverson, 63 cows, 14,150M, 4.23 percent; 599F.

Also, Carl J. Rosiak, Nicholson, 43 cows, 15,525M, 3.80 percent, 590F; Alyneddy Farm, New Milford, 32 cows, 13,586M, 4.33 percent, 589F; Keefer and Shetterly, Millersburg, 83 cows, 14,300M, 4.08 percent, 584F; Robert W. Campbell, Narvon, 40 cows, 13,915M, 4.03 percent, 561F; Harold R. Kulp, Pottstown, 40 cows, 13,575M, 4.08 percent, 555F.

Thirty-one individual production awards based on butterfat were presented in the various age groups. Individual awards:

Five awards were given in the yearling class. Heindel Farm placed first with Heindel Pride Mia, 1-8, 13,496M, 4.0 percent, 536F. Other records ranged down to 12,168M, 4.0 percent, 481F. Other winners were Robert Campbell, Warren Thomas, Emlenton; and Charles Young, West Grove.

The five awards in the two-year-old class were shared by Androssan Farms and James Martin. Top producer was Androssan Hi Kick Snowdon, 2-7,, 17,574M, 4.3 percent, 751F. Other records ranged down to 16,316M, 4.3 percent,, 708F.

Among the three-year-olds the

LOYSVILLE — Dairymen looking to improve their herd's milking performance through better balanced rations may find welcome help in a recent addition to Kreider's Mill. Mark Kreider, owner, has opened a forage testing lab at the mill.

Since last fall, Kreider's Mill has offered this service to dairymen across Perry and surrounding counties, which has proven a great success.

As most area dairymen know, forage testing is not a new revolution in the industry, but having a lab so close to home is.

Kreider said he saw a great need for a local lab about two years ago when the region's hay crop failed. He said that most dairymen were buying truck loads of hay and needed forage test results quickly if they were to maintain production levels.

Time was crucial, but it was impossible to get the results quickly when the forage samples had to be send 300 or more miles away to a testing lab. Once a sample was sent, it took approximately two to three weeks to receive the results. By then, the dairymen were feeding a different load of hay.

"We constantly knew where we were two weeks ago," Kreider said.

Kreider realized there was a significant problem with this system of send-away forage testing and devised a solution. John Nimmons, a sale representative for the mill with a degree in biology from Shippensburg State College, had the ability and knowledge to run a testing lab. So, with the technician at hand, Kreider established a forage testing lab at the mill and had it ready for use in November, 1981.

Nimmons first step in the testing process is collecting the forage sample from the farmer. Once at the lab, he weighs the forage, giving him a standard to gauge his results. Now, the forage is ready for the oven. The forage is placed in a specially designed forage drying oven to remove all the moisture. After drying, the forage is broken down into a fluid substance with the use of acids and heat. With the forage in a fluid state, different chemical dyes are added to determine the levels of protein, calcium and phosphorus. Nimmons uses a spectrophotometer to find the measurements of each nutrient.

Since November, Nimmons technical ability and speed in processing the tests, one to two days, ha dairymen

Dave Roth, of Milmay Farms, is a firm believer in forage testing program conducted by Kreider's Mill. All hay fed to his Perry County herd is tested so that it can be nutritionally balanced into the overall dairy ration.

state, different chemical dyes are added to determine the levels of protein, calcium and phosphorus. Nimmons uses a spectrophotometer to find the measurements of each nutrient.

Since November, Nimmons technical ability and speed in processing the tests, one to two days, has been beneficial to dairymen across the county.

Dave Roth, Milmay Farm, testified to the labs benefits for him. Roth said that he buys most of his forage and would be lost without this quick-result forage testing from Kreider's Mill. Roth stated that several months ago he bought a load of hay and didn't have it tested. After feeding it to the cows, his production dropped immediately. He said it didn't take long to get a sample tested and have his feed changed accordingly. And his production not only came back, but increased.

Monthly DHIA records, which show benefits of balanced ration program, are reviewed by Thomas Dum, of Dumbelle Farms, and Bob Laisdale, District Purina Manager. With them is Dum's daughter, Meranda.

Roth has a rolling-herd-average of 19,500M with 724 pounds of fat and he attributes this improved level to the management of his feed program through the assistance of the forage tests and the technical advice of the management team at Kreider's Mill.

Thomas Dum, a prominent dairyman in the state and owner of Dumbelle Farms in Perry County, also finds Kreider's forage testing lab an excellent benefit to his business.

"With such quick results, we can keep our cows nutritionally fit producing top quantities of quality milk all the time," he said.

Dum also has found that such a precise, balanced feed program of dairy rations and forage is not only beneficial to production, but to the cows over-all health in breeding and calving.

Bob Laisdale, District Manager for Purina, works closely with Kreider's Mill, which is solely a Purina dealership. He stated that Mark Kreider and John Nimmons have established a new area of service at a local mill like none other in the state.

Laisdale stated that the beauty of this local lab is in the minimal amount of time, one to two days, it takes to have the forage results back to the customer.

"With a time frame of one to two days, a dairyman can have his dairy rations changed weekly to correspond with a particular type of forage," he explained.

"However, many dairymen don't understand that forage is everything, he continued, "it is the backbone of the cow and her production."

Laisdale explained that the grain dairymen buy from any feed mill is really only a supplement to the cows overall diet. He said that during a normal day a cow's diet consists of 30 to 35 gallons of water, 40 pounds of corn silage, 12 pounds of hay and 18 pounds of grain of which only 5½ pounds of the total 18 are purchased directly from the feed mill. As Laisdale pointed out, over half of the cows daily diet consists of forages, forages that need to be tested to find out their nutritional levels to supplement the dairy rations accordingly.

Kreider and Laisdale stated, "We are in business to help the dairyman make a profit because our future depends on their profitability.

"Perry County dairymen are the best dairymen in the state and we want to make them even better with this type of service."

National FFA to visit students Wednesday

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

LANCASTER — Vocational agriculture teachers, supervisors and educators from throughout the U.S. and Canada will be visiting Lancaster and three surrounding counties on Wednesday to get a first-hand look at local FFA in action.

The trip to southeastern Pennsylvania is part of a week-long national workshop that is being held at the National FFA Headquarters, Alexandria, Va., for the more than 200 vo-ag instructional personnel from 45 states and Canada.

The workshop is concentrating on the Supervised Occupational Experience (SOE) phase of the total vo-ag educational program.

As part of the local visit, 26 vo-ag teachers from Lancaster, Lebanon, Chester and Berks counties will act as hosts for small groups of six or seven of the workshop participants and take them on FFA visitations to students' homes, farms or places of agribusiness employment, where they can observe the SOE program firsthand.

Other portions of the Wednesday program will include opening sessions at two Lancaster County agribusiness firms, visits to high school vo-ag departments and meetings with school officials, a panel discussion as followup to the SOE tours and a dinner featuring Robert Scanlon, State Secretary of Education, as speaker.

The visiting group will include high school vo-ag teachers, members of state supervisory staffs and agricultural education personnel from land grant colleges.

"The Supervised Occupational Experience traditionally has been the heart of the vo-ag program," explained Robert Seefeldt, National FFA program specialist.

"In the SOE program the FFA students put into real life situations what they have learned in the classroom in the form of various projects, ranging from field crops five awards went to Androssan Farms and Heindel Farms. In first place was Androssan Classic Pearlina,, 3-7, 21,373M, 4.3 percent, 929F. Other records ranged down to 18,903M, 4.3 percent, 814F.

In the four-year-old category, Heindel Farms took the top spot with Heindel Pride Laurel, 4-0, 17,808M, 4.3 percent, 767F. Other winners came from Androssan and James Martin and the five records ranged down to 15,770M, 4.7 percent, 737F.

For five-year-olds, Androssan Ex Evangeline, 5-10, was high with 20,882M, 4.6 percent, 964F. Among six cows honored were those also from Keefer and Shetterly, Delaware Valley College and James Martin. The records ranged down to 18,596M, 4.3 percent, 799F.

The five records honored among the six-year-olds belonged to Androssan entries. Tops was Androssan S.V.C. Tourist Class, 6-0, 23,030M, 4.4 percent, 1017F. The records ranged down to 20,193M, 4.2 percent, 841F.

Among the indivudual awards, 18 went to Androssan cows, five to Heindel, three to James Martin and one each to Robert Campbell, Warren Thomas, Charles Young, Keefer and Shetterly and Delaware Valley College.

It was reported that 31 Ayrshire herds are on DHIA or DHIR test.

Winners in the judging contest in order of finish included:

Men's Division – Don Shetterly, Earl Keefer, Milt Brubaker and Garrett Hunter.

Women's Division – Grace Seidel, Sandy Shetterly, Mary Clark, Cindy Crawford and Karen Long.

Youths, 16 and under – Donna Shetterly, Krista Long, Debbie Shetterly and Steve Shetterly.

HARRISBURG — On Aug. 1, commercial contracts will be sent out to exhibitors for the 1983 Pennsylvania Farm Show, reports Horace Mann, director of Pennsylvania's largest indoor agricultural show.

As the mail carries the paperwork to next year's exhibitors, Mann and crew are readying the Farm Show Complex for the January show and others throughout the year. One project that is "almost ready to go out for bids", says Mann, is the paving of the north end of the parking lot, an area formerly owned by the City of Harrisburg and used as an incinerator site.

Along with the paving project, work crews at Farm Show keep busy with the ongoing painting chores that only temporarily erase visitors' graffiti. They also are working on improving the exhaust fans in the concession area of the main exhibitor's building to prevent the "air pollution" problems that occurred last year.

One improvement Mann is enthusiastic about is the addition of a computer printout on the livestock scales used to weigh Farm Show steers. This printout, he says, will eliminate all future arguments about steer weights.

Waiting in the wings is the planned zoning of the farm show building which will be an energy and money saver. This project will separate the various buildings in the complex so their temperatures can be controlled independently — saving on heating and cooling costs. Preliminary meetings have been held on this proposal.

One improvement Mann says he hopes to realize in the near future is the replacement of the present floor in the main exhibition building. Mann says he plans to put down an industrial concrete whenever the old asphalt tile is replaced.

"That old tile was made by Armstrong years ago," Mann notes. "Today, you would have to put two tiles down to equal the thickness of one of those old tiles." However, years of wear have taken their toll on the sturdy flooring.

With some projects underway and others still on the drawing boards, Mann's concern with the overall management of the Farm Show building is obvious. "We're doing what we can with the money we receive," he says.—SM

Penn State picks Ag Arena plans

MONACA, Pa. — Sketch plans for the proposed Agricultural Arena at Penn State were approved by the University Board of Trustees.

The plans, by the architectural firm of Dagit and Saylor of Philadelphia, call for a building with an earthen arena floor of 90 by 180 feet. It will seat 600 and have office and storage facilities.

"The Agricultural Arena will be used for student resident instruction activities in the University's College of Agriculture. These include the annual horticulture show and various animal shows," said Robert A Patterson, senior vice president for finance and operations.

"It will also be available for use by the general agricultural community in Pennsylvania."

Such a facility is needed, he said, to provide a central location for activities that are now scattered throughout the campus and are sometimes spoiled by bad weather.

The building will be located near Beaver Stadium, adjacent to the Meat Animal Evaluation Center. It will be next to the proposed Park Avenue connector road to the State College bypass, a route that eventually could become a major access way to the University Park Campus.

The Agricultural Arena is expected to cost approximately $900,000 with the funds coming from private gifts. An 18-member Ag Arena Campaign Committee, comprised of alumni and friends of the University and chaired by University Trustee Obie Snider of Imler, is engaged in the fund-raising effort.

In addition, the Penn State Fund Council and the Ag Alumni Society are involved with the effort.

The next steps in the process are submission of preliminary plans and then final plans for the building, Patterson says. If there are no serious delays, construction could begin in the spring of 1983.

Garber, Brommer emerge top winners from 4-H dairy day

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

QUARRYVILLE — It was a beautiful day to win a Grand Champion title as the cool breezes filtered the buildings at the Solanco Fairgrounds around five such lucky members, all competing at the Lancaster County 4-H Dairy Show, Wednesday.

But for two Grand Champion winners — Anita Brommer and Gerald Garber — the breezes went unnoticed because they were busy relishing in the distinct honor of double and triple awards.

If a top winner could be tagged among such stringent competition, it would have to go to Gerald Garber of Willow Street, son of Kenneth and Thelma Garber.

Gerald won Grand Champion of the Guernsey breed, Champion Senior Showman, and Reserve Champion Owner-Breeder.

Gerald, a fifth-year FFA member and tenth-year 4-H member who waited till his last year to receive the title, proudly led 3-year-old Willows Deacon Candace to top honors.

Candace's dam is Willows Glad Cissy and the sire is Lyrene Wistar Deavon.

Gerald, the 18-year-old owner of 12 Guernseys, graduated from Lampeter-Strasburg High School.

It is perhaps Anita Brommer who could claim the second highest honor from the show. This 15-year-old, having shown the same animal for the past four years, earned Grand Champion of the Ayrshire breed — the same title she left the ring with at Farm Show, in the youth division.

Anita, the daughter of Edward and Marilyn Brommer, led Piney Grove Flashy Agnes to top honors.

One of the most coveted titles to be earned at the dairy day is that of Grand Champion of the Holstein breed. This year it went to 16-year-old Mark Welk, son of Paul and Beverly Welk of R1 Peach Bottom, showing Yankeeland Milestone Sherry.

Mark, in his third year of FFA and seventh year of 4-H, topped over 100 entries to win his first grand championship. Mark is a junior at Solanco High School and owns 10 cows of his own.

A sister/ brother duet took top honors in the Jersey breed. Capturing Grand Champion was 12-year-old Helen Arrowsmith with Hillacres Ben Ellen. This fourth-year 4-H member had Grand Champion last year also, with the same cow.

Helen's brother Matthew, 17, received Reserve Grand Champion with 5-year-old Hillacres Samson Henessey.

Helen and Matthew are the children of William and Geraldine Arrowsmith of R1 Peach Bottom.

The fifth breed — that of Brown Swiss — was claimed by Earl Eshleman of R3 Elizabethtown. Earl, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Eshleman, is a sixth-year member of 4-H.

Earl won his title with a senior calf, Shady Creek Libby Alma. The new champion is the eighth child in the Eshleman family to show cows, but the first to show Brown Swiss.

Alma's dam is CIE Shady Creek Libby Ann, and the sire is Maple Grove Performer.

In addition to Matthew Arrowsmith in the reserve class, three other showers claimed the title in their respective breed.

Reserve Champion winner in the Holstein breed was 14-year-old Mike Shertzer, son of James and Audrey Shertzer of Millport Rd., Lancaster. Jim, a fifth-year 4-H member showed four-year-old Rocky Spring Robin.

In the Ayrshire breed, Randy Groff, 11-year-old son of Robert and Esther Groff of R1 Ephrata, showed 2-year-old Springville Billie to reserve honors. Billie's dam is Springville Millie and the sire is Toll Gate Grand Frotune.

Capturing reserve title in the Guernsey breed was Mary Ann Witmer, daughter of Raymond and Louise Witmer of Willow Street. Mary, 16, is an eight-year member of 4-H, showing 2-year-old Penn Del Vesuvius Melody. Melody's dam is Penn Del Potentate Mayflower and the sire is Penn Del Hornet Vesuvius.

Judging the show were Jane Pepple, Oxford; Carol and Eugene Schurman, Indiana County Extension agents; and Jed Beshore of New Cumberland.

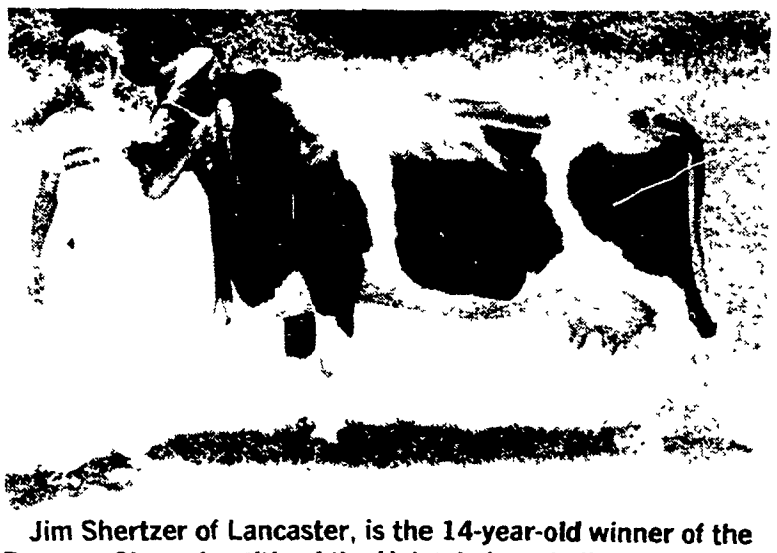
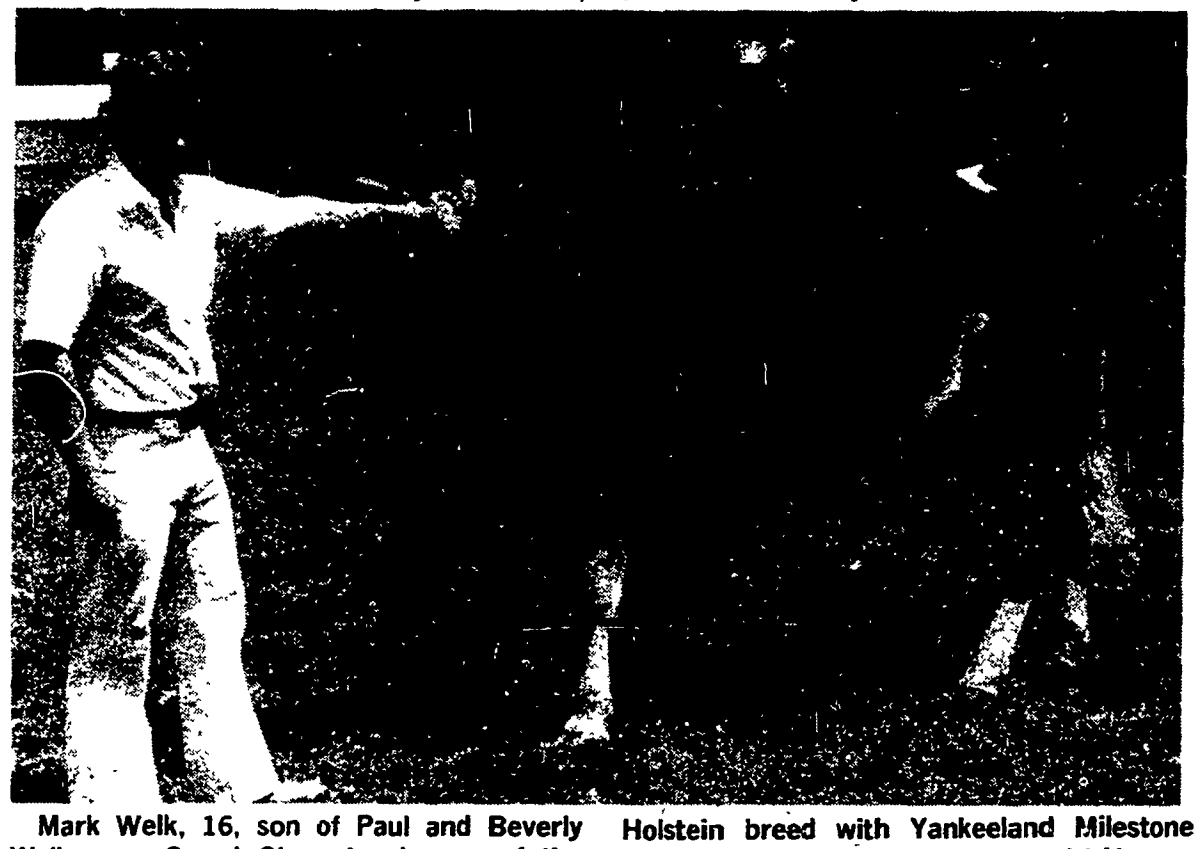
Gerald Garber of Willow Street and Mary Witmer, also of Willow Street, captured Grand Champion and Reserve Champion, respectively, of the Guernsey breed at Wednesday's show. Gerald is the son of Kenneth and Thelma Garber, and Mary is the daughter of Raymond and Louise Witmer. Gerald also received the Senior Showmanship Award.

In the Ayrshire breed, Anita Brommer emerged victorious. Anita, the 15-year-old daughter of Edward and Marilyn Brommer, stands with Piney Grove Flashy Agnes - the same animal she has shown in the last four years of her seven years in 4-H.

Earning Reserve Champion honors in the Ayrshire breed, was Randy Groff, son of Robert and Esther Groff of R1 Ephrata. Randy, 11, showed Springville Billie.



Jim Shertzer of Lancaster, is the 14-year-old winner of the Reserve Champion title of the Holstein breed. Jim, the son of James and Audrey Shertzer, won with Rocky Spring Robin.



Mark Welk, 16, son of Paul and Beverly Welk, won Grand Champion honors of the Holstein breed with Yankeeland Milestone Sherry. Mark is in his seventh year of 4-H.

other cows were purchased from Joyce's father, Nathan E. Stoltzfus of Gap about a year ago.

Marvex Jo is a daughter of Con-Noll Gent Jolly, sired by Lawcrest Marvex-Twin.

Capturing Junior Champion honors was Sylvia Frey,11, of Willow Street who showed 10-month-old Killdee Linder Bess.

Sylvia, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Mowery Frey Jr., has been in 4-H for 2 years and showed at the same event last year.

In addition to Sylvia's win, the Frey family took home trophies for the coveted titles of Premier Breeder ad Premier Exhibitor. The Freys milk about 100 Holsteins

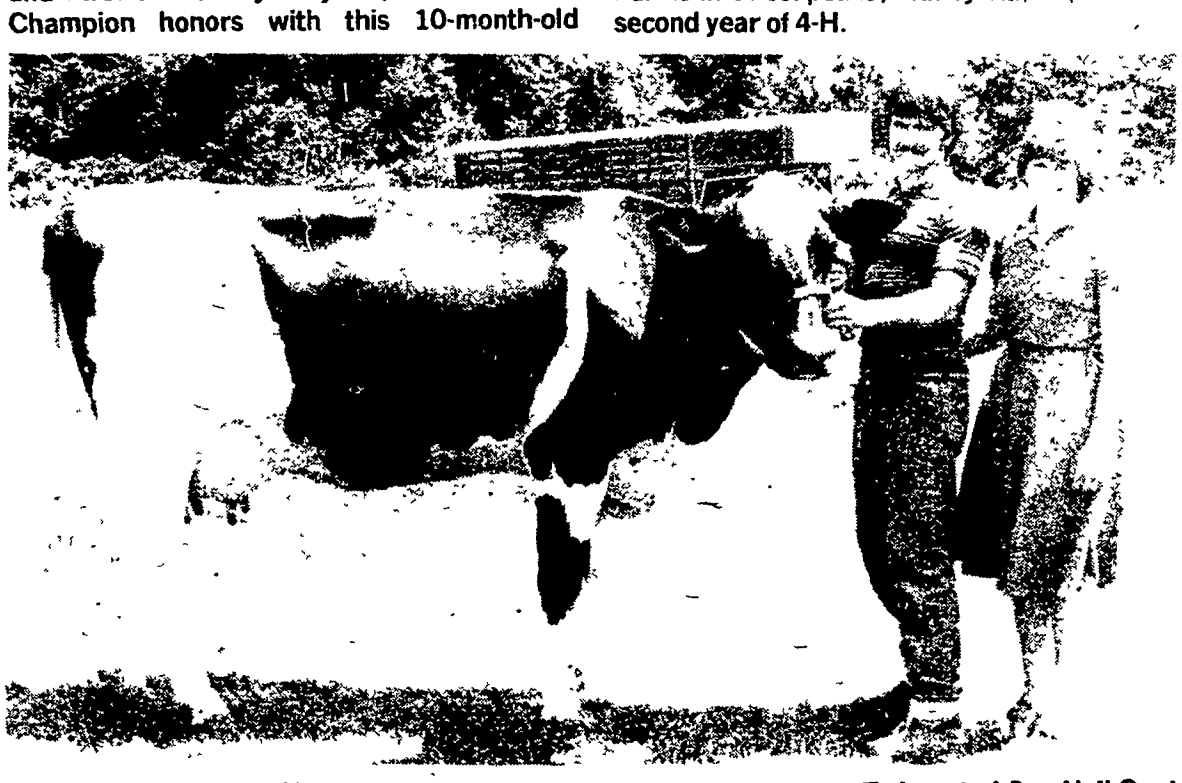
Sylvia Frey of Willow Street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Mowery Frey Jr., earned Junior Champion honors with this 10-month-old senior calf, Killdee Linder Bess, from Killdee Farms in Chesapeake, Md. Sylvia, 11, is in her second year of 4-H.



Capturing Reserve Champion honors were Clifford and Joyce Blank of Kinzers with this three-year-old, Con-Noll Marvex Jo. Jo, sired by Lawcrest Marvex-Twin out of Con-Noll Gent Jolly was bred by Joyce's father, Nathan E. Stoltzfus of Gap who owned her until last year.

Junior Reserve Champion honors went to Paul Horning from R1 Stevens with this seven-month-old heifer calf, Turnpike-View Creek Ivy.

Del.-Md. plans forage field day

CHESWOLD, Del. — A Delware-Maryland Forage Field Day will be held at 9 a.m. Monday, August 2, at Delaware State College's, Hickory Hill Research Farm on Rt. 42 between Cheswold and Kenton, Del.

Also cooperating in the field day are the University of Maryland and the University of Delaware.

The program opens with a wagon tour of research plots. Included in the tour:

Overwintering steers on soybean residue, Ed Jones, Delaware State College; High-tensile fence, costs and advantages, Ed Jones; Increasing protein content of silage, George Hanlein, University of Delaware; Infrared analysis of feed materials, John Shenk, Penn State University; Year-round grazing, Ken Bell, Delaware State College; Increasing the drying rate of hay in the field, Les Vough, University of Maryland; No-till establishment of forages, Dave Woodward, extension agent, Kent County, Md.; and Bob Rouse, extension agent, Caroline County, Md.

Following lunch, hay samples from growers will be tested by infrared analysis and demonstrations will feature hay treatment equipment and no-till drills.

Wheat program

funding increase will allow creditworthy countries to expand borrowing once financial or other conditions change.

Block also announced these other 1983 program provisions:

— farmers will get an advance payment equal to one-half the estimated 1983-crop deficiency (target price) payments at the time they sign up. This will help farmers who have tight cash flow problems. Signup will begin Sept. 7 for winter wheat producers and later for spring wheat farmers.

— a target price of $4.30 per bushel;

— a loan rate of $3.55 per bushel for grain placed under the regular loan program and $4 per bushel for wheat placed into the reserve. Reserve storage payments will remain at 26.5 cents per bushel; — acreage taken from production must be devoted to conservation uses.

Farmers participating in the 1983 acreage reduction program must reduce their wheat acreage for harvest by at least 20 percent from an established wheat base. If the farmer participated in the 1982 wheat program, the 1983 wheat acreage base will be the same as the 1982 base. For producers who did not participate in the 1982 wheat program, their 1983 acreage base will be the average acreage planted for harvest of the 1981-82 crops.

To meet the conservation use requirement, a farmer with a 1983 acreage base of 100 acres can plant no more than 80 acres of wheat for 1983 harvest. The remaining 20 acres must be devoted to conservation uses.

If farmers plant fewer than the permitted 80 acres, they will be permitted to devote fewer acres to conservation. For example, if only 50 acres are planted, only 12.5 acres (25 percent of 50) will have to be devoted to conservation use.

The land taken from production and devoted to conservation must be eligible cropland protected

Shelly dairy blends color and production

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

MANHEIM — Last winter, Harold Shelly accepted the Lancaster County DHIA award for high Ayrshire herd in the Garden Spot.

Shelly's 18 registered Ayrshires turned in a rolling herd average of 15,450 pounds of milk and 606 pounds of butterfat with a 3.9 percent test. Some may have viewed Shelly's success as the product of good management.

Maybe so.

But Harold and his sister Elva knew the award resulted from a "lucky break."

The "break occurred in Harold's leg about five years ago and prohibited the Manheim dairyman from attempting any farm work. While Harold was recuperating, Elva, who manages the Ayrshire string, and the Shellys' DHIA supervisor came up with the idea to test the Ayrshires separately from the rest of the herd — 30 registered Holsteins.

"I told Harold I had a notion to separate them," explained Elva. But her brother, who manages the black and whites, agreed the change was indeed a good idea.

"It's nice to know what each herd is doing," added Harold.

The two breeds have filled the Shelly barn for more than 20 years and the lively, smaller Ayrshires seem to hold their own at the feed bunk, commented Elva. A visitor to the Shelly barn will notice the obvious color division — the Ayrshires occupy the first 18 stanchions on the right while the Holsteins fill in the balance of the 48-stall barn.

More distinct, however, are the animals sizes. Whether the Ayrshires are large or the Holsteins are small, the animals look suprisingly similar in stature.

Although Harold is currently breeding for more size in the Holsteins, both brother and sister are pleased with the herds' performances. The Holstein herd currently makes a rolling herd average of 17,977 pounds of milk and 649 pounds of fat with a 3.6 test.

One high-producing Holstein is Rosewyn RORAE Dandy. Three years ago she was born twin to a bull which would all but seal her fate on most farms.

However, because she was out of the popular sire Elevation, and despite predictions from veterinarians, Harold decided to raise her to breeding age. If she did turn out to be a non-breeder, Harold explained, he planned to butcher her for meat. But that was not the case.

"When she was old enough she came in heat," he recalled.

Meanwhile, a cattle dealer visited the Shellys one day with a prospective buyer from Wisconsin. The buyer liked the Elevation daughter and offered $2,500 for her. Because she was born twin to a bull, the Shellys did not vaccinate her, Harold said, thus restricting her from inter-state travel. Later, Harold turned away another buyer and the bred heifer was home to stay.

Even though she freshened a month early, Dandy still produced more than 700 pounds of fat. In her second lactation, Dandy went down in production for almost a month due to a bout with mastitis but still came back to milk 19,538 pounds of milk and 767 pounds of fat with a 3.9 test.

Needless to say, the Shellys agree their decision to keep Dandy until breeding age was a good gamble.

"She's got a better test than most cows and she has the size," Elva noted.

"I believe she'll be my best cow," added Harold.

The successful gamble with Dandy contrasted with the unsuccessful venture 22 years ago when Harold and Elva first entered the dairy business.

The brother and sister, two of ten children of Abram and Minnie Shelly were raised on a beef operation. The family always maintained at least one cow for milk and Elva remembered having just about every breed.

One family cow was a Holstein-Guernsey cross. She was artificially bred to an Ayrshire bull and produced a heifer.

Meanwhile, Abram Shelly had about 20 idle acres of pasture on the farm. Elva and Harold decided to buy a few head of grade Holstein heifers, breed them and sell them as springers and fresh.

But 1960 was not a good year to sell cattle, they recalled.

"The milk price kept dropping. Farmers were getting about 60 percent parity. It was a time when nobody was taking anything on," Harold explained.

The Shellys began selling some of the heifers only to find out that at best they were breaking even. Rather than sell the remaining animals, Harold and Elva decided to start milking a herd and set out to find a milk market.

They knew of one shipper in Elizabethtown and drove out to inquire about a possible market. However, they met with refusal.

On the way home, they spied a milk truck and followed it to its destination — the Mount Joy Cooperative.

"They took us in right away," Harold said. The co-op gave the Shellys a year to ship from the original milkhouse which at the time was across the lane from the 21-stall barn.

"The milkhouse had to be connected," said Harold.

Eventually the Shellys moved the dairy across the fields to the second of their father's farms. The herd included the remainder of the Sister and brother Elva and Harold Shelly entered the dairy business more than 20 years ago when a bred heifer business proved less than lucrative. Today, the Shellys manage a dual herd-registered Holsteins and registered Ayrshires and led Lancaster County for high Ayrshire herd last year.

Elva begins the afternoon feeding much to the delight of these onlooking Ayrshires.

The Shellys make it a practice to raise all heifers born twin to a bull in hopes that they may get another Rosewyn RORAE Dandy, pictured here. They originally kept the heifer for slaughter but when she cycled, Shelly bred her. The Elevation daughter now has records to 20,000 as a 3-year-old.

With just 54 acres on the Shelly farm, Harold said that he can't afford to grow anything but feed for the cows. The Manheim farmer begins the second cutting on this alfalfa field.

Franklin Holstein Club slates field day

CHAMBERSBURG — The Franklin County Holstein Club will hold its annual Field Day on July 27 at the Robert Harwood Farm.

New Jersey Holstein breeder Bill Pettit of Huff'n Puff Farm, will be the featured speaker and official judge of the judging contest.

Registration begins at 10 a.m. followed by the judging contest. Lunches will be available and must be reserved at 11 a.m. at a cost of $3 for adults and $2 for children.

The Harwood farm, which features a computer feeding system, is located one mile north of Greevillage off Route 11. Turn right on Musser Road.

In other Franklin County Holstein activities, there will be a County Consignment Sale on September 29, 1982. For more sale information contact either Robert Eckstine or Wayne Hall.

More field day information can be obtained from club secretary Norman Sollenberger.

grade Holsteins, the Guernsey-Holstein cross and her Ayrshire daughter.

At the time, the barn held 26-stalls and was expanded to 42. To fill the barn, the Shellys bought a load of registered Ayrshires from a dispersal in Paoli, Chester County.

Elva explained that they continued with Ayrshires because they could buy the registered animals for less money than the higher-producing grade Holsteins. The Shellys paid no more than $410 for cows at the Paoli dispersal, said Elva.

One of the first registered Holsteins was a tall Ivanhoe daughter.

"She was all legs," recalled Elva. The Shellys paid $800 for her which topped the sale held at the Carlisle fairgrounds.

Finally the barn was full with Ayrshires and Holsteins...but it was not to last.

In August 1970, the Shellys awoke in the middle of the night to see a fire blazing through the second floor of the barn. They mangaged to save all the animals but the fire reduced the barn to ash and in its wake claimed a combine, a small tractor, a wagon and a mow full of hay.

For the next three months, the herd lived in the pastures. Twice a day, Elva and Harold drove the herd across the road to their brother Abe's Holstein farm for milking. In November 1970, as the autumn air grew colder, the herd moved back to the new barn.

The Shellys switched from twice a day feeding to three times. Each animal receives eight pounds of a 14 percent protein mix and is also supplemented with a 17 percent feed. Producers with more than 50 pounds of milk daily get a top dressing of a 40 percent concentrate.

The herd gets alfalfa hay once a day and spends the morning at the feed bunk filled with either corn silage or haylage. In September, the Shellys will construct a poured concrete silo to give them additional storage.

"I bought the silo last year," said Harold. "I want to put it up so I don't have to make hay," he laughed. As a result of this summer's heavy rains, Harold had to put the first alfalfa cutting in the silo. The new silo will be built just in time for corn silage.

Fifteen years ago, Harold was one of the first farmers in the area to install a liquid manure tank. He empties the concrete tank three times a year. The farm's clay soil, he explained is too soft for daily hauling.

"When it's wet, you just go down," he said.

Harold manages the Holstein herd and the field work. Although all the cows are in his name, Elva manages the Ayrshires from birth to choosing herd sires. In addition, she is responsible for raising all the replacements.

"I milk the Ayrshires but I raise all the calves. They're all my babies," she said.

Together, the brother and sister have combined their talents to manage a colorful and productive herd.

Increased ag exports are linchpin to farm income

BY SHEILA MILLER

HERSHEY — Exports and their impact on the future of U.S. agriculture have been in the spotlight during the past two weeks as state and federal officials pondered their possibilities and potential.

The term "linchpin" was linked with international exports by several agricultural leaders, including Under Secretary Seeley Lodwick, with USDA's International Affairs and Commodity Programs.

In his opening remarks to more than 30 state marketing officials here on Monday, Lodwick stated, "We all are working to increase sales of U.S. products at home and abroad. Indeed, the strengthening of U.S. agricultural exports is the linchpin of the Reagan Administration's programs to improve farm income.

"All of our domestic farm policy is based on the need for greater market orientation in agriculture and less government intervention in the marketplace — at home and abroad. To that end, boosting agricultural exports is the number one priority of the Reagan Administration for agriculture — and eliminating unfair trade practices by our major trading partners the number one goal of U.S. trade policy."

Last Tuesday, Secretary of Agriculture John Block met with Secretary of Treasury Donald T. Regan, Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige, along with Ambassador William E. Brock, U.S. Trade Representative; Walter J. Stoessel, Jr. deputy secretary, Department of State; Norman Bailey, senior director, national security planning, National Security Council; and Lodwick. The purpose of the meeting was to review recent developments in agriculture and trade and to discuss U.S. agricultural trade initiatives.

"We discussed our new assessment of the 1982 Soviet grain crop, which the Department of Agriculture estimated yesterday will reach only 170 million metric tons, down from the previous estimate of 185 million tons. The significance is that the Soviet Union will need to import agricultural products heavily in the upcoming year if it is to keep its herds and flocks intact and maintain the dietary levels of the Soviet citizens."

Block also reported the U.S. crop estimate is forecasting a record winter wheat harvest of 2.12 billion bushels, a record barley harvest of 479 million bushels, and oats at 580 million bushels — up 14 percent from a year ago and 27 percent from 1980.

He commented the "forecast of expected heavy grain supplies in the United States focuses attention on both the ability of the nation to export agricultural products to gain valuable positive trade balances and also the necessity for strong agricultural export sales to provide the basis for a vigorous U.S. agricultural economy."

In projecting the possibilities of future US-USSR grain sales, Lodwick stated the Soviets have purchased 14 million metric tons out of the 23 million metric tons they are authorized to buy until Oct. 1 of this year.

"After Sept. 30, the Soviets can buy into the market like anyone else," he said, adding future grain sales do not hinge on an extended long term agreement. "Actually, the Soviets could begin buying today for October delivery."

Surveying current domestic conditions, Lodwick stated, "There was a time when the United States primarily exported only its surpluses, and overseas sales played a very small role in most farmers' incomes. That has changed dramatically. Now we must export and that's the challenge we face today."

He reported farmers, nationwide, depend on foreign sales for about one fourth of their market returns, and almost two out of five acres of U.S. farmland are used to raise export commodities.

"In fact, U.S. farmers now plant more acres here to produce food for Japan than Japenese farmers plant for themselves at home," commented Lodwick.

Although the need and the ability to export agricultural products have been established, Lodwick warned of negative factors which are working to depress sales, such as large global grain stocks (U.S. feed grain sales down 19 percent), high interest rates, the strength of the dollar, and worldwide economic conditions.

He anticipated U.S. agricultural exports to reach about $43 billion this year, which is down about 4 percent from last year's record. These exports provide 1.51 million jobs in related industries.

"This downturn, the first after more than a decade of steady growth, teaches us we cannot take for granted continued expansion in export markets," said Lodwick.

The U.S. official chastised foreign countries who practiced protectionism, export subsidies, and other types of unfair trading practices.

"We in the United States intend to compete hard in the international marketplace; we want to compete fairly, and we expect our trading partners to do the same," he said.

"American's farmers and the workers in its agricultural support industries certainly are entitled to reap the rewards of their efficient production. Our farmers take great risks and work hard to produce a quality product at competitive prices. And it's our job in government to make sure that they have a chance to compete fairly in world markets."

Lodwick cited some areas where the Reagan Administration has pushed to increase ag exports, including the April 1981 lifting of the Russian grain embargo, new trade policy initiatives to encourage liberalization of Japan's import restrictions, and efforts to get the European Community to abandon unfair trade policies.

"I cannot overemphasize the harm that embargo did — hurting U.S. farmers far more than it did the Soviet Union," Lodwick criticized. He pointed out that U.S. grain sales to Russia before the embargo represented 70 percent of the country's imports. Now, the U.S. slice of the import pie has been pared down to less than 30 percent, while countries like Australia, Argentina, and Canada have increased their production to fill Russian grain orders.

Meanwhile, the U.S. government is trying to regain its position as a world agricultural supplier through promotion. Nineteen U.S. sales teams were dispatched to countries in Africa, Latin America, and Asia; new cooperator activities are being encouraged in China and West Africa; new agricultural trade offices were opened in Tunisia, Nigeria, and China and another is soon to open in Saudi Arabia.

"We're making more effective use of export credits, including a concerted effort to make full use of the total authorization of $2.5 billion for CCC credit guarantees," said Lodwick. "We're giving extra emphasis to the export of value-added products, already at $12 billion to $13 billion (one-third of the export total) a year and certain to be enhanced by lowering of trade barriers in Japan and Europe."

Lodwick reiterated Reagan's pledge that there would be no return to the stop-and-go export policies of the past several years, that no export restrictions will ever be imposed because of rising domestic prices, and that the only way a farm export embargo would be imposed would be in the context of a broader embargo mandated by an extreme foreign policy situation.

Along with praise for the Reagan Administration's stand on embargos, Lodwick also praised actions by Congress to support agricultural trade. He pointed to the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981 which contains authority for export susbsidies, if necessary, to counter unfair trade practices of other countries. This act also established an as yet unfunded export credit revolving fund to stimulate export sales.

When asked if the U.S. will counter unfair trading practices with the subsidy provision, Lodwick answered "definitely yes." Despite congressional leaders "visiting" with EC officials for more than a year, there has been little progress shown by these countries to change direction in trade policy, he said. Subsidies of U.S. agricultural products, said Lodwick, could be in the form of lower interest rates or lengthened loan payback periods.

In the case of dairy products which are accumulating in CCC warehouses, Lodwick said the federal government cannot handle these exports in the same manner as it would poultry. "The CCC owns the dairy surpluses. We don't want to shake up the world markets, especially when we'd be hurting our friends," he said, analyzing the impact of dumping U.S. dairy surpluses onto the international market.

"We're looking at several opportunities for disposing of the dairy surplus," he stated. One option he outlined was the possibility of New Zealand opting for an additional 10 percent of butter when their current contract terminates Jan. 1, 1983. There also is additional opportunities to dispose of cheese and nonfat dried milk, along with the butter, Lodwick said.

But, Lodwick pointed out, there are two problems facing the U.S. dairy industry — overproduction and disposing of the government supply. He noted the Reagan Administration is putting a higher priority on new legislation to bring oversupplies under control than on getting rid of the stored surpluses.

"The strengthening of U.S. agricultural exports is the linchpin of the Reagen Administration's programs to improve farm income," remarked Under Secretary for International Affairs and Commodity Programs Seeley Lodwick, center, during Monday's session of the National Agricultural Marketing Organization, meeting in Hershey. Although most of what he had to say was not the best news, here he shares some lighter views with Pa. Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell, right and Eugene Thompson, state executive director for Pennsylvania's ASCS.

supplies and markets for 119,000 members with total sales over $2 billion annually."

As Steele heard the award winner's accomplishments being read, the sober emcee's face broke first into a look of puzzlement and then into a broad grin as he realized he was listening to his own life's story. In accepting the award, he stated, "People working together can do almost anything."

A surprised George Steele, left, accepts the annual NAMO award, presented by president Ken Meier of Oregon. "You really know how to take the wind out of a fella's sails," exclaimed the Agway chairman and marketer who served as the Thursday evening banquet's master of ceremonies.

Kline's Holstein earns top honors on their Willow Street farm.

Paul E. Horning from Rl Stevens won the Reserve Junior Champion award for his seven-month-old heifer calf, Turnpike-View Creek Ivy.

The calf, bred and showed by Horning, is the daughter of El-Ann Irma Poneer Ideal, sired by Creek-Bluff Elevation Lester.

Horning, in partnership with his father Paul S. Horning, milks about 70 cows on their Stevens farm.

Capturing top Futurity honors and receiving $289 for the win was Steve Kauffman, 20, of Elizabethtown.

Steve, the son of Robert and Mariam Kauffman is in his fifth and last year of FFA.

Steve's entry, three-year-old Penn-Springs Milestone Ada tested at age two with a record of 23,000 pounds with 3.7 test in fat in 305 days.

Ada was sired by Poverty-Hollow Milestone out of Penn-Springs Elevation Aflie.

Steve and his family milk 68 Holsteins and farm 200 acres of land.

FLIP THE LEVER AND GO FROM OPEN SPREAD TO INJECTION

That's right. When you buy a liquid manure tanker with an injection system from US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania, you get some very unique features. A blower-type pump forces the heavy slurry up and out over the tanker against a special spread-baffle. That gives you an excellent open spread pattern to properly cover your fields. Or Flip the lever and the slurry is fed into the ground just where you want it.

In addition, the injecting chisels pull from the axle for great strength. So, before you buy any liquid manure tanker, take a look at this new equipment that let's you flip a lever and go from open spread to injection. Wheat program from wind and water erosion. Acreage designated to meet the conservation requirement may not be mechanically harvested and grazing will not be permitted during the six principal growing months.

In addition, Block announced an incentive to divert eligible cropland for permanent conservation practices. If the producer incorporates permanent conservation practices, such acreage will be eligible as conserving-use acreage for a three-year period. The permanent conservation practice will be eligible for cost-share payments through the agricultural conservation program. This approach will permit farmers more flexibility in managing their total farm base for future-year participation. It also reflects the secretary's intent to introduce more conservation incentives into the annual commodity program.

Reacting to Block's announcement, American Farm Bureau President Robert B. Delano charged that farmers "got the chaff" from the Administration's new wheat program and that wheat growers would likely be stuck with less income at higher costs to consumers and taxpayers in the long run.

Delano criticized the USDA policymaker's decision to pre-pay half the target price to farmers who agree to take 20 percent of their land out of production, calling it "simply short-run, stop-gap expediency to cut back on line items in the Office of Management and Budget's 1983 budget without regard for interest of farmers."

"By USDA's own calculations, the 20 percent acreage reduction program gives wheat producers the lowest real income per acre planted of any program considered," Delano said.

"And apparently in anticipation of continued high production on remaining acreage, USDA has called for new farm subsidies to build farm storage facilities. Tax costs will climb even as farm prices are held down.

"Farmers want to produce for markets, not storage bins. We can't store our way to prosperity."

Delano said he wondered if the Administration team really understood the serious problems in agriculture.

"In January of this year we told Agriculture Secretary Block that an acreage reduction program to cut back on an agricultural plant producing too much should have been put in place for the 1982 wheat crop," he said. "The new program is simply a case of too late, too bad."

Farm Bureau's own proposals for a wheat program would have featured payments to farmers to divert acreage from production prior to planting, at a lower long-term cost and under conditions where the harvested crop could be sold under competitive market conditions.

At the same time Block was making his announcement of next year's wheat program, Iowa's congressman Berkley Bedell introduced legislation which would give farmers an addional option for paid diversion next year. His bill, HR 6756, would require the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture to implement a paid diversion program to supplement the voluntary acreage reduction program.

According to Bedell, the Congressional Budget Office has estimates that if this program is adopted, government farm costs for the 1983 crops of wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice will be $1 billion less than the cost of conducting only the USDA set-aside programs.

Bedell's paid diversion program would require the secretary to augment the 1983 set-aside programs for wheat and feed grains by offering farmers a direct payment for taking an additional 10 percent of their crop base out of production. Land diverted from wheat production would receive a $2 per bushel payment based on yields; feed grain payment would be $1.50 per bushel.

"By providing this additional incentive," said Bedell, "participation in our crop reduction programs will increase; sufficient amounts of each producer's land will be idled to assure a cutback in production and an increase in prices; and exposure to the U.S. Treasury will be significantly decreased."

SILAGE CONDITIONER PRESERVATIVE and NUTRIENT BALANCER

MOPRO

LIQUID SILAGE FORTIFIER

A revolutionary new concept in improving silages. University tested and proven MOPRO Liquid Silage Fortifier is formulated to balance the major mineral and protein deficiencies of silages. It also prevents loss from mold and rot after being removed from the silo or trench. MOPRO is added at the time of ensiling and is applied by metering equipment with very little handling cost. MOPRO will not corrode mild steel tanks or brass fittings and has no free ammonia odor to irritate the eyes or skin. MOPRO is a homogeneous solution of ammonia salts, urea, cane molasses, and minerals (except salt and calcium) in an efficient liquid carrier. It provides nitrogen for improved fermentation in the rumen and contains a mineral balance of phosphorous, magnesium, and trace elements including selenium. MOPRO 100 will give a resulting silage of up to 14.3% protein.

or livestock to working in agribusiness.

"But in recent years with the widening of the scope of FFA to include more students with non-production farm backgrounds, it has become more difficult to adapt such a program.

"The workshop will re-emphasize the importance of SOE and let participants exchange ideas on how they conduct their programs.

"Since the Lancaster and surrounding area is such a good diversified agricultural region and the FFA programs there are excellent, it was selected for the tour."

Upon arrival in Lancaster County, the visitors will be divided between Victor F. Weaver, Inc. and Sperry New Holland. At the two firms, the groups will tour facilities and discuss ways to better prepare ag students for work in agribusiness.

They will then be broken down into the small SOE groups and visit the schools of their local host vo-ag teachers and accompany them in contacts with several of their FFA students at the location of their projects.

After the visitations, they will return to the Leola Family Restaurant, where a panel of teachers, administrators and a representative of the National FFA Office will review reaction.

The day-long program will conclude with the dinner attended by Secretary Scanlon and other state educational and agricultural officials.

Phillips directs U.S. rural development

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Willard (Bill) Phillips, Jr., has been named director of the Office of Rural Development Policy in the U.S. Department of Agriculture, according to Under Secretary Frank Naylor, who supervises small community and rural development programs in USDA.

The Office of Rural Development Policy is the Department of Agriculture's focal point for rural development policy coordination. The office reports to Under Secretary Naylor. A primary responsibility of the staff is to gather recommendations from the rural public and state and local government officials for national rural development policies and strategies. Secretary Block will use these recommendations in developing a national rural development strategy report that will be submitted to the Congress in January 1983 and then updated annually, in accordance with the Rural Development Policy Act of 1980.

Phillips, who had been acting director since February, came ot ORDP in November 1981 as deputy director. Before that he was assistant for congressional affairs at the Appalachian Regional Commission. He also has served in the Department of Commerce with the Economic Development Administration and worked as Administrative Assistant to former U.S. Reps. Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell of North Carolina and Robert W. Kasten, Jr., of Wisconsin (now U.S. Senator) and Rep. Don Ritter (R-Pa.).

Phillips was born in Elkins, West Virginia, and has served as an elected member of the Elkins City Council. He is a graduate of Potomac State College at Keyser and of West Virginia Wesleyan College in that state.

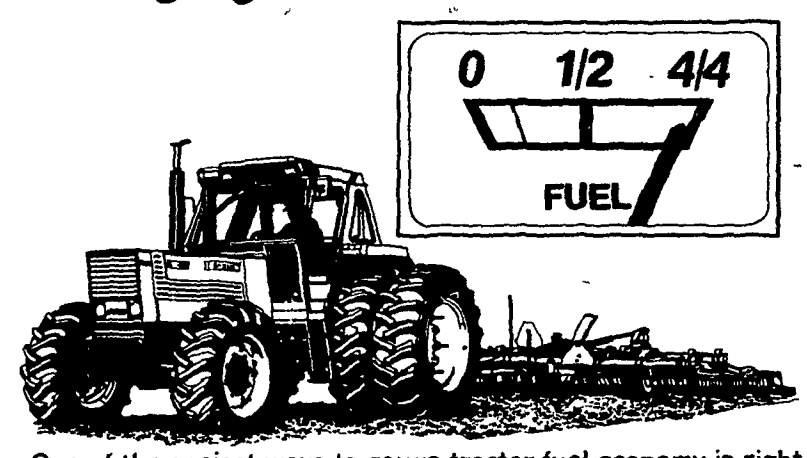
Here's one of the best ways to "gauge" a Hesston tractor.



One of the easiest ways to gauge tractor fuel economy is right on your dashboard. To put it simply, a Hesston tractor stays full longer.

We offer Hesston's full range of fuel-efficient diesel powered tractors... from 42 to 162 PTO hp.

And they're all available with 4-wheel drive. This center-line 4WD can be used full time...letting you do more work with less horsepower and with less fuel.

HESSTON The PRIME LINE

"My childhood was a normal one (I think)," says Carpenter, "growing up in a household of three brothers and two sisters."

Carpenter's interest in drawing, especially cartoons, began during his childhood. Then, in 1973, Carpenter decided to turn his hobby into a business and enrolled in a correspondence course from the Famous Artists School of Westport, Connecticut. He marketed his first cartoon in 1976 and finally became a full-time cartoonist April 1981.

Some of Carpenter's characters have appeared in such national magazines as National Enquirer, Boy's Life, and Home Life.

"Now I am very excited and happy to add Lancaster Farming to my list," says Carpenter. "Before signing off, I want to say hello and I hope that you will enjoy reading Otis as much as I enjoy drawing the old rascal."

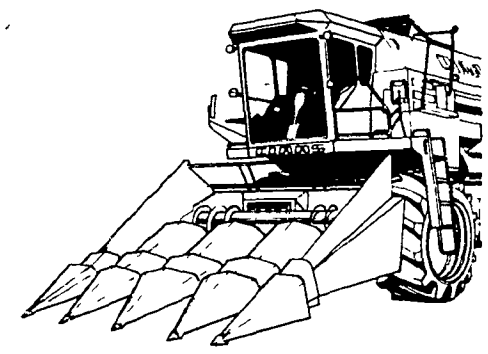
CLAAS



Built up to quality. Not down to price.

If you've wanted a combine built with the same dedication to quality and efficiency that make you a successful farmer, meet the combines that meet your standard!

Look into these quality Claas features

- World-famous quality Mercedes engines are available in selected models
- Sheet metal components are dipped in electrically charged primer, then paint. This bonds paint to metal, inhibits rust, reduces maintenance. Then the combine is assembled with plated bolts
- Separating and cleaning area is longer, wider and higher than competitive combines, to easily handle a heavy volume of straw and stalks
- A single lever controls several functions hydraulically cutterbar height, reel height and cylinder speed, plus ground speed on mechanical transmission machines
- Optional corn header steering system guides the combine down the rows to free your hands for other harvesting functions

We'd like to show you those, and all the other Claas features that contribute to efficient harvesting. Stop in soon!

From farm wife to farm tour guide

Polly Stoltzfus finds work with people enjoyable

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

Being a tour guide requires more than just knowledge; it requires a warm smile, an outgoing personality and an understanding both of the area being toured and the wishes of the tourists. Polly Stoltzfus has all these qualities and puts them to use in her work at the Mennonite Information Center on Route 30 East.

Polly has been helping visitors feel at home in Lancaster County for the past 16 years, and began by giving tours through the Center both for individaul tourists in their cars and for bus groups. She now works on the staff at the Center, dispensing information and giving tours to the Tabernacle which is adjacent to the Center.

It doesn't take long to realize that being with people is very important to this former dairy farm wife. Nine years ago she and her husband Melvin moved off their farm because health did not permit Melvin to continue farming. But their experiences with tourists began on the dairy farm.

Polly recalls, "The Extension office asked us on numerous occasions if they could bring tours to our farm. Quite often we were asked to entertain a bus of visitors. We just enjoyed so much those experiences with guests."

It was while they were still farming that the pastor of the Paradise Mennonite Church, Harold Book, became manager of the Information Center and asked members of the church to become tour guides. Polly says, "Melvin kind of pushed me into it, but I soon found out that I loved traveling with tourists and explaining the history of Lancaster County."

She acknowledged that she and Melvin are "history bugs" and have enjoyed touring major churches in Lancaster city.

She adds, "Lancaster County is really unique in the way William Penn laid it out with the many nationalities settling here. Eventually they became assimilated and they became the Pennsylvania Dutch. It was really a melting pot."

Polly is convinced that what tourists most want to see are "our beautiful farms. They always comment on how well kept they are. We have a beautiful heritage and we want to preserve it. Farmers want to build it up for the next generation, and they keep their buildings in good repair. I don't know if it is just competing with their neighbors or just a desire to pass on something greater than they found. In any case, Lancaster County farmers keep up with the times and their farms are their pride and joy."

She said she feels the majority of the tourists who come here have heard that Lancaster County is a nice quiet place to come, with good food and good lodging."

Being a farmer's wife was a big help to Polly because tourists have a lot of questions about farming. Futhermore, her farm background was a benefit to the tourists lucky enough to have her for a guide, because she often took them into her farm and allowed them to walk through the barns and observe the milking. She says, "It was a real treat to the people."

Many of the farms neighboring the Stoltzfus farm were bought by Amish families as they became available for sale. As the Amish became their neighbors, Polly and Melvin learned more about them. "As we made friends we accumulated a lot about their way of life," Polly states. Sometimes she would take interested tourists to these Amish farms, explaining their customs and way of life.

Polly's tour guiding was done primarily with families in their cars. She recalls, "It was a little scary. It is much easier getting on a bus. In the car you are dealing with a driver who is trying to observe and hear and drive. I had no close calls," she said with a laugh.

Polly is proud of the training the Center offers all their guides, all of whom are Mennonite. She says, "Our training is open to all tour guides throughout the county. We want the story to be factual." As new things come on the scene, they don't hesitate to get their guides together and update their information.

She points out, "For a good many years we leaned heavily on information about the Amish and their history. We got acquainted with the Amish of other areas so we could answer questions. Now we identify not just with the Amish and Mennonites in Lancaster County, but point out that we are not the only area with Amish and Mennonite citizens. We are in the minority in census."

There are many local Mennonite homes which are open to guests, according to Polly. They do not advertise, but have their names at the Center to fulfill a need. Polly says, "People tell us, 'remember, if everything is filled up we have an extra room.' When visitors stay in homes, they will incorporate these guests into their family and take them along to sewing circle. A few serve breakfast and meals during the day. We are encouraging more and more homes to provide meals. We would like to see more of that fellowship."

The most frequent question asked by visitors is "What is the difference between Mennonite and Amish?" The second most frequent question is "Where can we see them?"

Polly says she explains that the difference is a cultural difference. "We start by telling them that in the Reformation time we were all one people. In 1690 the Amish broke away for a more conservative life and at that point they stood still. When new inventions came they were afraid they would draw them away from their faith or their family life." Polly explained that they still use that criteria in adopting new methods - if it doesn't draw them away from their religion or their family they will use it.

One of Polly's present duties is to conduct tours of the full scale reproduction of the Tabernacle which is adjacent to the Center. Polly says it is a replica of the Tabernacle Moses was told to build in the Sinai after he had led his people out of Egypt. Polly gives one reason for tthe construction of this building, "It is important to all church history and we thought it was important to show the traveling public that we are Christians. Some people have been here several times and didn't know we were Christians."

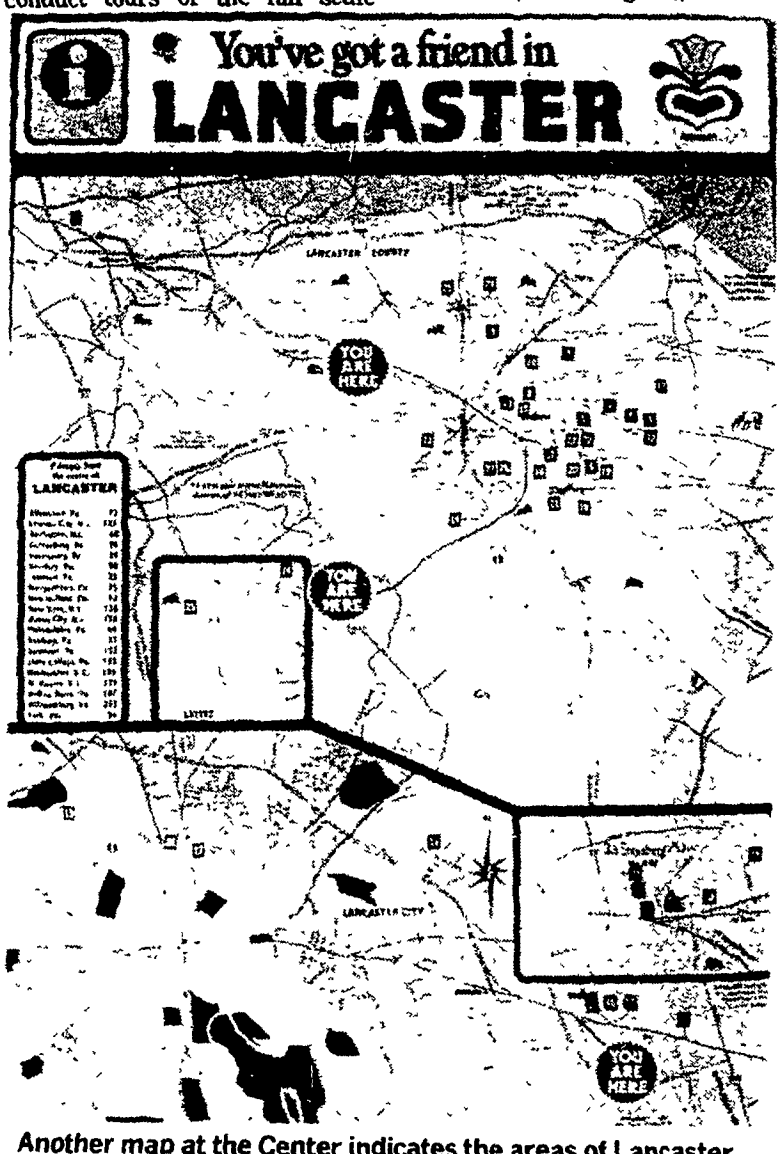
The Center and the Penn Dutch Tourist Bureau work closely together, although one is supported by church monies and the other through taxes. This changes the emphasis on the information being given out at the two Centers, but they cooperate on welcoming the tourists.

(Turn to Page B4)

This map traces the history of the Mennonites from their European background, and shows that Mennonite settlement are worldwide. Polly says this is helpful in explaining the Mennonite hertiage to visitors. A former tour guide. Polly now is on the staff and spends three days a week answering questions and making tourists feel at home.

Homestead Notes

Doing needlework is one of the pleasures Polly enjoys in her free time. Here she works on a needlepoint piece which she is adapting to match the colors in her living room.



Another map at the Center indicates the areas of Lancaster County which mark the beginning of tours organized by the Mennonite Information Center.

The majority of the tourists visiting here come from the Eastern seaboard, but many come from Japan, Germany and other European countries.

Obviously an enthusiastic supporter of farming, Polly says about her move from the farm to Glendale Drive in Lancaster, "I've acclimated myself now. We knew we had to leave because of Melvin's health. I hated to give up my home, but I'm happy now. It is being kept clean and neat and the family that lives there is enjoying it so. It's nice to see what you enjoy being enjoyed by others." The farmhouse dates from 1774.

With the four Stoltzfus children scattered around the country, Polly and Melvin enjoy traveling to visit them. Elaine, 36, is married to Donald Brubaker and lives in Ohio; Nancy, 34, is married to Leon Weaver and lives in California; Joyce 31, is married to Ron Meck a local poultry farmer, and Marlin, 28, is married to Beth Musser and lives on a house on the Stoltzfus farm.

When they travel what does Polly like to do best? Take guided tours, of course, and compare notes on how other guides operate. She notes, "The private tours we do seems to be unique to Lancaster County. We have never found them anywhere else." She adds, "The most important thing about a guide is to come across professional."

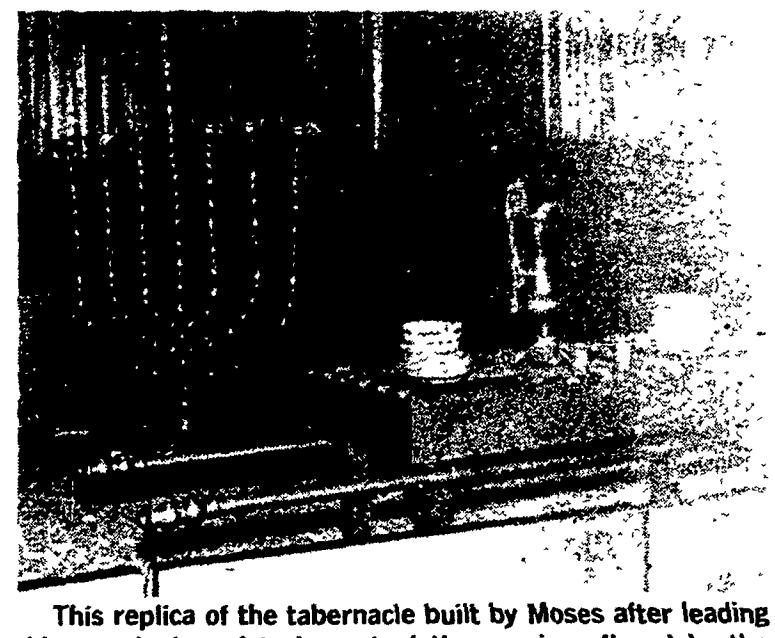
A Registered Nurse, Polly continues to do some home nursing over the winter months. "I did nursing until all the children were out of high school. I went from nursing to tour guiding and for a while I did both. Then I was night supervisor in the infirmary at Calvary Fellowship Homes.

In January, Polly will begin her second term as president of her Farm Women Society 14. "I delight and enjoy Farm Women. It really is for rural women. We have 40-45 members, but are open for younger and new members."

A winter activity for Polly is her weekly Bible study with women of many denominations. "We have a group that's been doing it for eight years."

While she enjoys cooking, Polly doesn't try to create new recipes. "I follow what my mother made or try what's in a book. Sometimes I think I'm a cookbook collector." She says when new cookbooks arrive at the Center, she often looks them over, then decides to buy them.

Polly teaches adult church school at her church and serves on the Shofar committee of the Lancaster Mennonite Conference which is an outreach to Jewish people.



This replica of the tabernacle built by Moses after leading his people to safety is part of the service offered by the Mennonite Information Center. The Center has a film to explain the Mennonite heritage, and offers many services to tourists to help them gain a full understanding of Lancaster County's heritage.

Polly enjoys needlework, and makes many of her Christmas gifts, including something for each of her seven grandsons. She also likes to garden, though her present garden is limited mostly to flowers.

Polly philosophizes: "People are unique. I haven't found a person I didn't like or couldn't find something to enjoy about." It is probably this attitude above all others which makes Polly the successful tour guide she is, presenting a positive and factual picture of Lancaster County's history and heritage.

Want to be N.Y. Beef Queen

HOLCOMB, N.Y. — Young women who have an interest in beef cattle and also an inclination towards royal titles and roles are invited to compete for the title of New York Beef Queen.

The New York Beef Cattlemen's Association and the New York CowBelles are sponsoring the contest in order to promote the beef industry in the state, to recognize the achievements of young women, and to "glamorize and otherwise add dignity to Beef Cattlemen's and CowBelles' activities.

Those interested in becoming the New York Beef Queen must be single, between the ages of 18 and 21, must be a member of or daughter or granddaughter of a member of the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association or the New York CowBelles.

The New York Beef Queen will be asked to perform her royal duties at the 1983 Empire Farm Days show, at the 1983 New York State Fair both during the cattle shows and at the Empire Court auction of the quality meat show carcass champions. She will also be assigned other appearances during the year.

The Queen will be selected on the basis of achievements with beef cattle, apearance, poise and personality.

Entry blanks and further information may be obtained from Queen Contest coordinator Jean Frost, 3709 Briggs Rd. RD3, Holcomb, N.Y. 14469. All entries must be returned by Oct. 1 and the Beef Queen will be named at the January annual meetings of the sponsoring organizations.

Beat the heat- enjoy a cold dish

Beat the heat? Is it possible to beat the heat we've experienced in the state in the last few weeks? Probably not, but at least mealtime — a time to relax and enjoy your taste buds — doesn't have to be a hot experience also.

Why not serve your family some cold dishes for breakfast, lunch and dinner? Cold dishes can have all the nutrients and vitamins that hot dishes have.

Following are a few dishes our readers suggested for beating the heat.

BANANA APPLE SALAD
2 red, skinned eating apples, diced
1 c. diced celery
1/2 c. broken nuts
1/2 c. seeded raisins
1/2 c. mayonnaise
1 T. lemon juice
1 banana, sliced lettuce cups
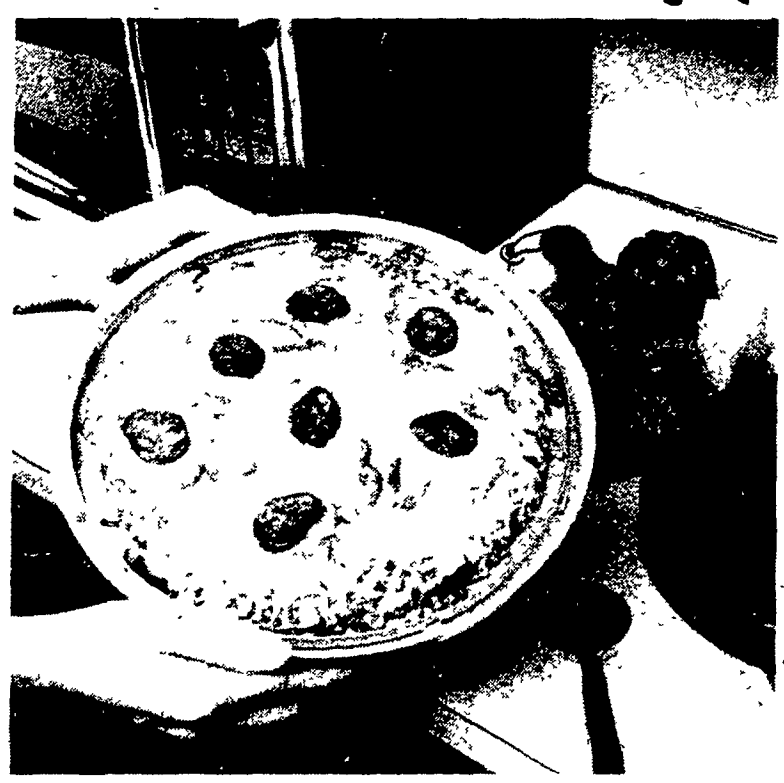
watercress

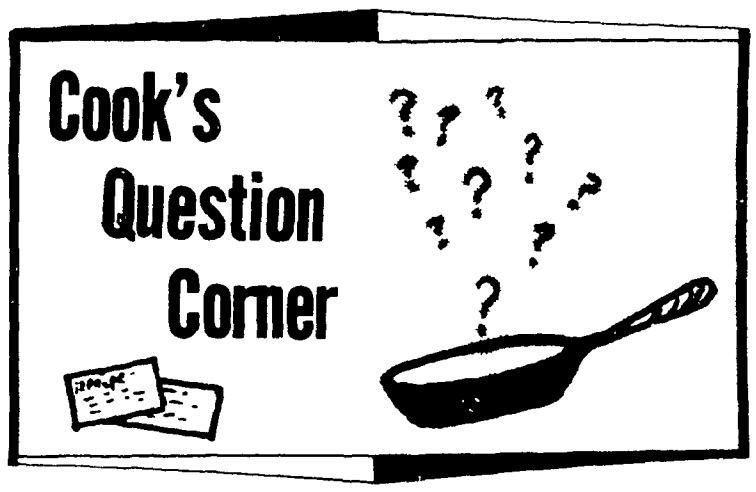
Combine apples, celery, nuts and raisins. Blend together mayonnaise and lemon juice. Add to apple mixture. Add slices of banana and mix lightly. Fill lettuce cup with apple mixture. Garnish with watercress.

Mrs. Charles Biehl, Mertztown



Cold pizza? Don't laugh until you've tried it. What rule says pizza has to be served warm? Actually, when it's served cold, the flavor of each topping is enhanced. What a great way to enjoy pizza on a warm day!

The hoagie or submarine sandwich is a deli special with its delicious meats and cheeses. And when it's served in Italian bread from your kitchen, it's got to be even better. Recipes included here.



QUESTION - We are still looking for an answer to the following request: When I was a child my mother would buy stale cakes from the baker and make a sheet cake that looked and tasted like brownies. Can anyone help me locate this recipe?

S. Cacciutti
Bala Cynwyd

QUESTION - Does anyone have a good recipe for making sausage, scrapple or puddings when butchering a pig? I would really appreciate explicit directions as I have never before made any.

Mrs. Glenn Miller
Honesdale

ANSWER - In answer to the question about cheese recipes, here is the name and address for supplies and recipes you need for cheese: New England Cheesemaking Supply Co., P.O. Box 85, Ashfield, MA 01330 Ask for their catalog and ask specifically for any recipes you want

Canning Methods

If you are one of the lucky few, you may have some tomatoes ripening in your garden. Some early varieties mature in late July, although summer's weather may delay their maturity a week or two. But whether this week or next, you may be ready to think about canning tomatoes and tomato juice.

I want to warn would-be canners that open kettle canning of tomatoes can be hazardous. Use the boiling water method instead.

Open kettle canning refers to boiling the juice for 15 minutes after pressing the tomatoes, boiling the jars and lids for 15 minutes, filling the jars with boiling juice, sealing them, allowing the jars to cool upside down. In theory, that's all right but any deviation, or any short cuts can mean serious trouble. The tomatoes and juice will not be properly sterilized and you will be faced with the probability of contaminated food from spoilage organisms.

Boiling water processing on the other hand, is totally safe when done properly. Even when one or two parts are not completed correctly, it is still more likely to be safe than open kettle canning under the best conditions. In other words, why take a chance? Always use the boiling water method when processing tomatoes.

To process properly, fill a clean, hot jar with either raw or hot cooked tomatoes, close the lid tightly, and process the jar in boiling water for 45 minutes for quarts and 35 minutes for pints. Process tomato juice 35 minutes for both quarts and pints.

Remember, you grew or bought all those tomatoes to save yourself some money, to keep your family healthy, and to preserve the flavor of summer fresh produce. Don't spoil your good intentions and efforts by being careless. Process properly.

Organically Grown

Do you think that organically grown produce is naturally more nutritious than conventionally grown produce? It is not. The term "organic" usually refers to foods grown on soil which has been treated with manure and composted materials only—no chemically made fertilizers or conditioners have been used.

There is no scientific evidence which demonstrates that organically grown crops are more nutritious than those conventionally grown. The protein, fat, carbohydrate, and vitamins of a plant's genetics, the weather, and the time when it is harvested not by the composition of the soil in which it is grown.

Fertilizers do, however, influence the mineral composition of a plant. But all nutrients, whether derived from organic composts or synthetically made fertilizers, are converted by the plant to inorganic chemical compounds before they are assimilated.

Another claim most organic food growers make is that no pesticides have been used in the growing or preparation of these products. Yet most of these do contain pesticide residues which remain in the soil for years and years after the last application. In addition, it is very difficult, if not impossible to protect soils from minute pesticide levels from drifting sprays, dust, or from runoff. In any case, pesticide applications are carefully monitored and regulated so that they do not endanger the safety of non-organically grown produce.

Because there is no legal definition of "organic" and there is no chemical difference between foods that are organically and non-organically grown, buyers beware. You may be paying extra money for a myth, not for extra nutrition.

LUNCH-ON-A-BREAD SLICE

1 lb. ground beef
1/3 c. evaporated milk
1/4 c. 3-minute brand quick oats
1 egg
1/3 c. chopped onion
1 t. mustard
1 t. salt
dash of pepper
1 c. grated American cheese
1/2 loaf French bread, cut in half, lengthwise

Combine first eight ingredients, plux 3/4 c. cheese. Spread mixture over top of open bread. Wrap foil in a boat-like fashion around crust portion of bread, leaving the meat uncovered. Place on cookie sheet and bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes. Sprinkle remaining cheese on top and return to oven for another 5 mintues. Serve hot or allow to cool.

Debbie Klingman, Pittsburgh

ITALIAN BREAD

5 to 5 1/2 c. unsifted flour
1 T. sugar
1 T. salt
2 pkg. active dry yeast
1 T. butter, softened
1 3/4 c. very hot tap water cornmeal planters peanut oil
1 egg white
1 T. cold water

In large bowl thoroughly mix 1 1/2 c. flour, sugar and salt and undissolved yeast. Add softened butter.

Gradually add hot tap water to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add 3/4 c. flour and beat at high speed 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour to make a stiff dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board and knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Cover; let rest for 20 minutes.

To make rolls: Divide dough into 6 equal pieces. Roll each piece into an oblong, 8x5 inches. Beginning at wide side, roll up tightly; pinch seam to seal. Taper ends.

Place on greased baking sheets sprinkled with cornmeal. Brush dough with peanut oil. Cover loosely with wax paper, then top with plastic wrap. Refrigerate 2 to 4 hours.

When ready to bake, remove from refrigerator. Uncover dough carefully. Let stand at room temperature 10 minutes. Make 3 or 4 diagonal cuts on tops with razor blade or sharp knife.

Bake at 425 degrees for 15 minutes for rolls, 20 minutes for loaves. Remove from oven and brush with egg white mixed with cold water. Return to oven; bake 5 to 10 minutes longer, until golden brown.

PGC warns against utility equipment damage

HARRISBURG — The Game Commission is again appealing to all shooters to handle firearms safely and sensibly to protect lives and save property.

Every year, as soon as schools close, there is a sharp upturn in shooting damage. Public utility equipment is a favorite target.

Much of the damage to utility lines, transformers, insulators, relays, etc., can be traced to youths using firearms carelessly. Most shooting incidents are deliberate, and annual property losses run into hundreds of thousands of dollars in the state

Evidence of misdirected target practice by youths during summer vacations has promoted law enforcement agencies to add special emphasis in their programs to impress upon teenagers and parents the importance of handling and using firearms properly to save lives, reduce injuries and protect private property.

Severe penalties can be imposed upon shooters who indiscriminately damage property or endanger others through deliberate or careless misuse of firearms.

Brown Swiss crowns Miss

BY SUSAN KAUFFMAN
Staff Correspondent

PEACH BOTTOM — The Pennsylvania Brown Swiss breeders have a new representative for their organization. The 1982 Swiss Miss is Anne Margaret Daubert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Daubert, Pine Grove.

Anne competed recently with two other contests during the annual state pinic held at President Donald Trimble's farm in Lancaster County.

Anne is active in Brown Swiss programs and 4-H cattle club showing. She was the captain of the Pine Grove archery team and participated in the high school marching band. She is a recent graduate of Pine Grove High School.

After possibly serving a year in Brethren Volunteer Service, she plans to attend college.

Last year, Anne served as the 1981 Schuykill County Dairy Princess. She owns a cow and a calf-part of the Brown Swiss herd her family maintains on thier farm.

The two other contestants were Lisa Zumbro, West Newton, and Kris Shive, Quakertown.

Lisa, a senior at Yough Senior High School, plans to go into farming and technical school training after graduation. She recently was the 1982 alternate West Moreland County Dairy Princess. She owns five cows and four heifers and has been active in 4-H dairy club activities and a judging team.

Kris is the daughter of Richard and Ranay Shive, Quakertown. Upon graduation from Quakertown Senior High next year, she plans to attend Delaware Valley College to study animal husbandry. This past year she served as vice president of the local FFA chapter. She has been active in area livestock and land judging contests also. She owns two cows which are kept at her grandmother's farm.

The 1981 and 1982 state Swiss Misses will attend the national convention in Ohio July 20 through 23.

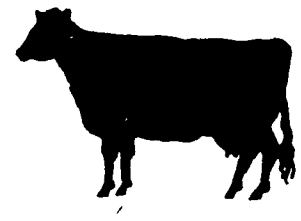
GET MORE PROTECTION FOR YOUR DOLLAR



ID-1
More and more dairymen who are switching to ID-1 are finding these improvements:

- Better quality udders following freshening
- Getting on feed faster
- Clears up a large percentage of sub-clinical and clinical mastitis
- Herds are getting a higher conception rate
- Calves get faster start and more protection against pneumonia and scours
- Less udder edema
- Faster milk-out with less Somatic Cell Count

Advantages of ID-1:
ID-1 contains a higher amounts of antibodies
ID-1 does work well in conjunction with antibiotics and other treatment in difficult cases
ID-1 when used alone does not give cause for discarding of milk and does not cause undesirable resistance to bacteria or virus
ID-1 has been developed in the field of a practicing veterinarian of 20 years
ID-1 is continuing its research on its values and uses of colostrual immunology, a field of which little research has been done.

Kid's Korner

NEWARK, Del. — It's frightening to see a horse collapse from heat exhaustion. The stricken animal lies on the ground and sweats profusely. Its muscles tremble involuntarily. Breathing and pulse are very rapid. Body temperature may be as high as 105 or 108 F.

University of Delaware Extension equine specialist C.M. Reitnour says heat exhaustion indicates a malfunction of the body's heat-regulating mechanism. It happens when a horse is subject to high heat, high humidity and poor ventilation for too long a time.

During summer a horse may collapse while doing light or heavy work, or even while standing still in an unventilated stall. Heat causes the animal's peripheral blood vessels to dilate, which leads to collapse of the circulatory system and shock.

If a horse shows signs of impending heat exhaustion — weakness and rapid breathing — cool the animal down as quickly as possible. Spray with cold water. Have it stand in ice water to constrict the blood vessels in the feet; this will help the circulatory system maintain enough pressure to keep the major bodily functions going, and may help prevent collapse, Reitnour says.

A veterinarian may administer fluids to replace those lost in perspiration and in the failure of the peripheral circulatory system.

Protect a horse from heat exhaustion by giving it plenty of clean, fresh water and an adequately ventilated stall. Make sure it has been through a good conditioning program before you demand any kind of heavy performance.

When the temperature and humidity are high, a horse may need frequent stops for rest and water. Salt is also essential, and should be kept available.

According to Reitnour, hot, humid summers make heat exhaustion a real possibility, so it's much better to take precautions than to risk the shock of collapse.

This cow knows how to beat the heat!

Here's what the recent heat wave does to a group of pigs — it makes them even more lazy than they already are. What a life these porkers live. They don't have to worry about paying bills - instead they make them. They don't blink an eye at a dirty pen - instead they roll happily in dirt. They don't count calories and eat green vegetables — why should they worry about their diet when man is crazy enough to do it for them?

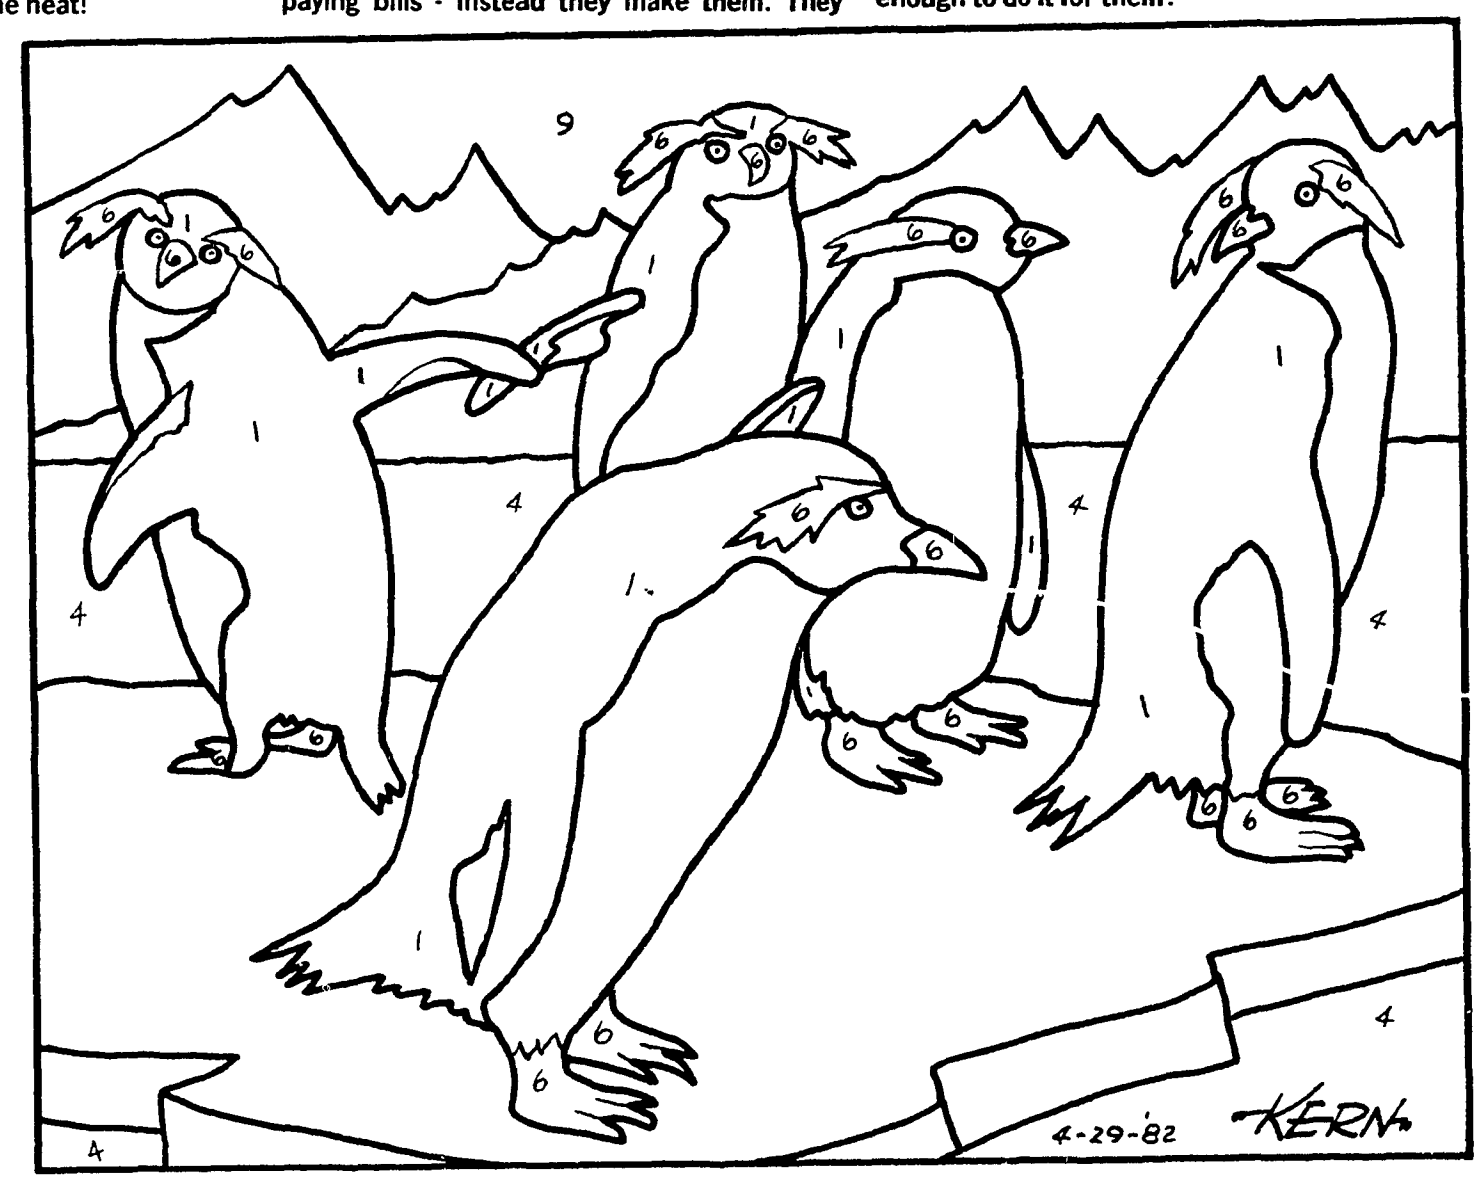
ROCK HOPPER PENGUIN. THESE STRANGE BIRDS OF THE ANTARCTIC LOOK LIKE LITTLE FAT MEN WEARING A DRESS SUIT. THEY HAVE SHORT FLIPPERS LIKE WINGS THAT LOOK LIKE ARMS. A MILLION YEARS AGO THEY LOST THEIR ABILITY TO FLY. THE MALE AND FEMALE LOOK SO MUCH ALIKE IT IS DIFFICULT TO TELL THEM APART.



If the heat is bothering you and you feel like you may melt, then color these happy penguins from Antarctica and think about the cool, refreshing iceberg they're standing on.

Talk to the man who knows feed handling systems.

Badger's Feed Handling Equipment is built to last with a minimum of maintenance and energy use. It is designed to help you meet your goals for profitable feeding.

Badger also offers the best finance programs in the farmstead industry with up to four months preinstallation waiver programs available from your participating Badger Dealers!

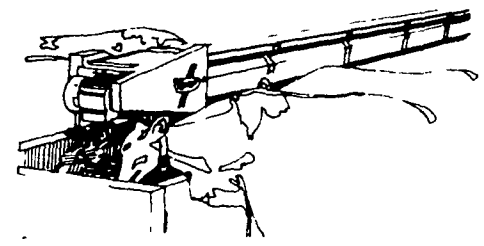
Why feed the same valuable feed to all of your animals when you don't have to? With Badger's Pow-R-Trac Feeder, you can save that valuable ration for high producers or finishing, and feed a different ration to the others. That's what SELECT FEEDING is all about. However, the Pow-R-Trac is adaptable to any feeding situation. A high volume feeder to minimize your labor and energy costs.

Feed handling versatility is the key to Badger's Pow-R-Glide.

Badger's Pow-R-Glide Conveyor/Feeder handles virtually any application.

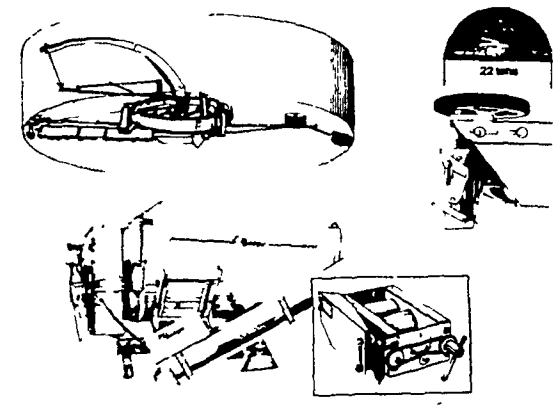
- High Volume Conveyor
- Bunk Feeder
- Conveyor/Feeder Combination



One machine, one low horsepower drive unit. Can be tailored to your operation, inside or outside, with inclines, declines and dropouts. It works and works efficiently!

Extra weight. Extra capacity. Extra performance for top unloading silos. That's what Badger's Pow-R-Trac Unloader is all about.

The Badger Pow-R-Trac is built better than competitive models with extra iron and extra weight to unload evenly, top to bottom. Match that extra weight with its hardened knives over the full length of the rugged auger and a digger wheel that shaves silage off the walls, and you've got an unloader that will chew through even the toughest hard packed or frozen material.



Now developing the right rations is even easier with Badger Feed Processing Equipment.

Make your feeding program even more profitable with a Badger Feed Weigher/Mixer and Roller Mill Feed Processing Equipment. It's backed by the Badger name which means you'll get the right mix every time.

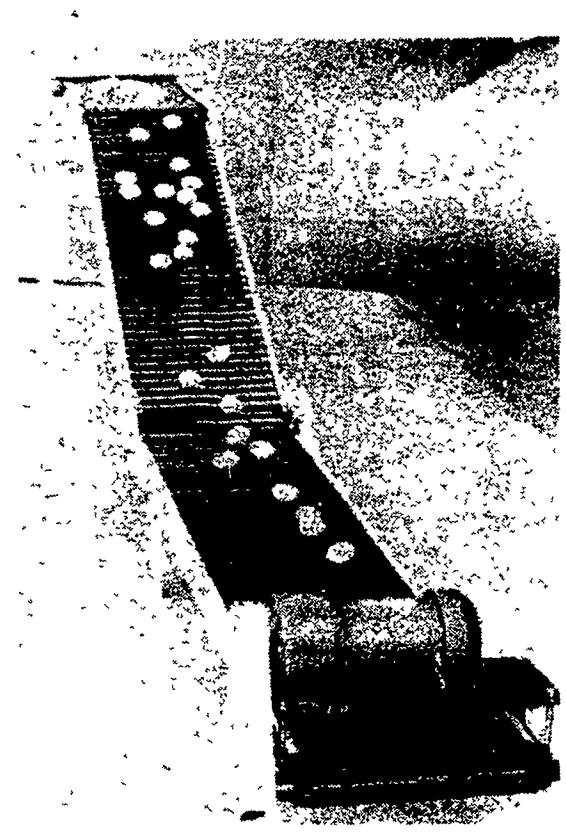
Farmer Automatic
Egg Cross Conveyor-Elevator



- ALL IN ONE UNIT
- NO EGG TRANSFER FROM BELT TO BELT FOR ELEVATION TO PACKER.
- NO COLLISION OF EGGS, EGGS ARE CRADLED BETWEEN PLASTIC RODS.
- NO BELT SLIPPING, UNIT IS OF ENDLESS ROLLER CHAIN.
- DIRT, FEATHERS AND ANY FOREIGN MATTER WILL NEVER REACH PACKER BUT WILL DROP BELOW THE CONVEYOR.
- SUPERIOR TO ANY OTHER TYPE OF EGG CROSS

The cross-conveyor is the result of years of development. It serves to transport eggs without manual handling. Due to its engineering perfection there is no damage to the eggs. Its design makes use of the unit-construction principle which, through low assembly costs, enables the assembly of an individual conveying system that is adapted to every situation. Furthermore, the cross-conveyor is designed for operation in any direction: straight, uphill, downhill.

ARRANGEMENT

The heart of the installation is the slatted conveyor belt consisting of plastic tubes connected at both ends to conveyor chains. The effective width of the cross-conveyor is 14½". The distance between the tubes has been optimized so that even small size eggs will not fall through the egg belt when making use of its full climbing power. The slatted conveyor belt runs in galvanized steel sections which are connected using vertically adjustable floor supports.

For driving purposes, alternative power units may be selected: conveyor length's up to 300' possible, depending on size of the power unit selected. Using a pivoting unit the eggs can be lifted from floor level to the collection table or any packer.

4-H'ers get into the fashion picture

By Sally Bair
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — The young women were fashionably dressed in the latest fabrics, styles and colors, including attractive fall and winter clothing. But, it wasn't a show revealing the latest in the designer collections; rather it was the annual Lancaster County 4-H Fashion Revue, an event which is as important in the 4-H world as couture shows are in the fashion industry.

This year there were 38 junior participants and 48 senior participants, all dressed in clothing they had sewn themselves as part of their 4-H projects. The clothing ranged from the junior projects which were often simple dresses, skirts and vests, to very complicated freelance projects which included everything from designer blue jeans to silk dresses to fashionable full length coats. Coats made a comeback this year, according to Extension Home Economist Michelle Rodgers, after being absent from Fashion Revue for many years.

It was an evening of beautifully constructed garments, and a switch to evening hours brought out many interested friends and family members, including some very proud fathers and little brothers.

Winners in both the Junior and Senior division attended regional 4-H Fashion Revue at Messiah College this week, with the opportunity to win a slot at State Fashion Revue in August. Some of the winners in the senior divisions were familiar names who have placed in previous years, and many clubs had multiple winners.

Senior winners included: Deanne Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Myers, 305 E. Fulton Street, Ephrata, and a member of the Ephrata Super Sonic Sewers; Stephanie Schaich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Schaich, 1401 Rothsville Road, Lititz, member of the Lititz-Rothsville Zig Zaggers; Judy Weaver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Weaver, 542 Stoney Battery Road, Lancaster, Mountville Community Club; Jennifer Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, 222 Spruce Street, New Holland, Garden Spot 4-H Club; Beka Baum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aldus Baum, R1 Columbia, Mountville 4-H Community Club; Anne Willwerth, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Willwerth, 120 Hummer Road, Ephrata, Ephrata Super Sonic Sewers; Rhonda Witmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marlin Witmer, 420 Clay Road, Lititz, Lititz-Rothsville Zig Zaggers; and Cheryl Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Martin, Lititz, R4, Ephrata Super Sonic Sewers.

Alternates in the senior division were: Christine Hess, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Melvin Hess, 2913 Marietta Avenue, Lancaster, Mountville Community Club; Lois Weaver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Weaver, 448 Ridge Avenue, Ephrata, Ephrata Super Sonic Sewers; Wanda Kay Hershey,

York fashion harmony reigns

YORK — Organ music and displays of musical instruments set the mood for the theme "4-H Fashion Harmony", during the recent York County 4-H Fashion Revue, held at the 4-H center, here.

Approximately 50 girls exhibited garments that had been made from their first through their ninth year of sewing projects. Skirts, sundresses, blazers, and vests were the most common garments made, however, dance costumes, warm-up suits and prom gowns are graced the stage as the girls modeled their creations.

Eight senior girls, selected as winners during the show, are eligible for regional competition.

Winners included: Carol Itle, Etters; Sharon Kindon, Hanover; Lisa Miller, Dover; Beverly Eisenhart, Thomasville; Martha Marsteller, Stewartstown; Diane Fuss, Hanover; Darcey Fesser, Hanover; and Dawn Raubenstine, Hanover.

Due to a 4-H exchange trip to Georgia, five of the winners will be unable to attend the regional competition, therefore, five alternates were chosen. Alternates include: Trudy Grove, Delta; Lori McCarty, York; Teresa McElwain, Stewartstown; Chris Wolf, Abbottstown; and Joanne Markman of York. Lisa Miller, Martha Marsteller, and Diane Fuss will also be going to the regional competition.

In the junior competition, three girls will go to the regional competition; they are Lewanna Richardson of Dover, Chris Fromn, Stewartstown; and Michelle Conley, Hanover.

Junior Division winners were:

Cindy Harnish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Harnish, Willow Street, R1, Penn Willow 4-H Club: Michele Rohrer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Rohrer, 702 West Lexington Road, Lititz, Elm Penryn Community Club; and Brenda Hess, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Hess, Conestoga R1, Penn Willow 4-H Club.

Alternates in the junior division were:

Lorri Rutt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Rutt, R2, Quarryville, Solanco Community Club; Tiffany Rohrer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rohrer, Nottingham R1, Solanco Thrifty Threaders; and Alice Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Thompson, R1, Mount Joy, Mount Joy Community Club.

Judges for the event were Susan Doyle, Mindy Johnston and Barb Shenk in the senior division and Kim Martin, Claudia Cross and Kathy Felty in the junior division.

Narrators for the show were 4-H'ers Deanne Myers and Jennifer Phillips.

A highlight of the fashion revue for the 4-H'ers was a talk by fashion consultant Sharon Sayer-Hufford on self image dressing. She told the audience that there are four important rules to follow, with the first one being, "Know what image you want to project. Visually you are telling people who you are." She told the 4-H'ers they should dress to project their own charisma and their own personality or to create a mood.

She suggested paging through fashion magazines to find out which pictures are appealing to find your fashion image. She also told the girls to make sure the image they are projecting is appropriate for the situation they are in.

The second step is to identify your figure type, and she says this requires being "real honest" about your figure. She suggests taking all your measurements, as they are listed in pattern catalogues, and determine such things as being short waisted or long waisted.

Miss Sayer-Hufford said a woman can create optical illusions to help create the image she wants, with dark, subdued colors helping make you appear short and brighter, contrasting pastels making you appear taller.

Knowing what colors are best for you is the third rule of self-image dressing and Miss Sayer-Hufford noted, "Your favorite colors may not be your best colors." She uses color drapings to see how different colors look on her clients, and pointed out that there are working colors and accent colors.

Her last rule for self image dressing is to avoid impulse buying. "Make sure your wardrobe is well planned," she advised. "Determine what is a fad and what is a fashion. True fashion changes slowly."

She suggested planning a shopping trip before each season with an objective friend and trying on different styles to find out what is flattering before purchasing patterns or fabric for home sewing. She says, "Be experimental, try on different styles and colors."

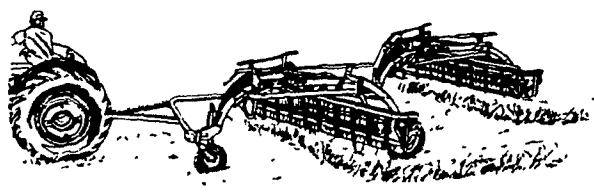
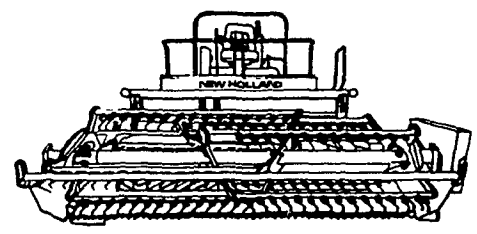
SPERRY NEW HOLLAND - FIRST IN HAY TOOLS!

SPERRY NEW HOLLAND IS THE UNDISPUTED LEADER IN THE HAY TOOLS BUSINESS. WHY? BECAUSE OUR MACHINES ARE BUILT WITH THE RUGGEDNESS AND DURABILITY THAT TODAYS FARMING DEMANDS. THEY ARE ALSO DESIGNED TO HELP YOU GET THE JOB DONE QUICKLY AND EFFICIENTLY. GET THE BRAND THAT MORE FARMERS CHOOSE - SPERRY NEW HOLLAND.

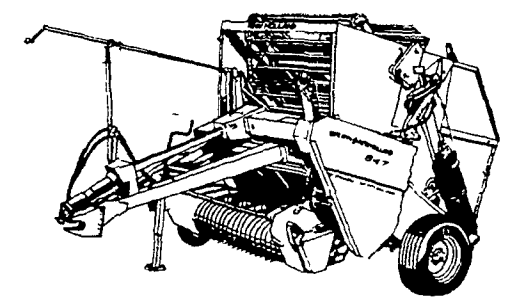


The Twindrower® dual-rake hitch lets you rake two swaths into two windrows, or two swaths into a single windrow. For road travel, both rakes line up behind the tractor. The Twindrower provides excellent maneuverability in smaller fields Beat the weather — in half the time.

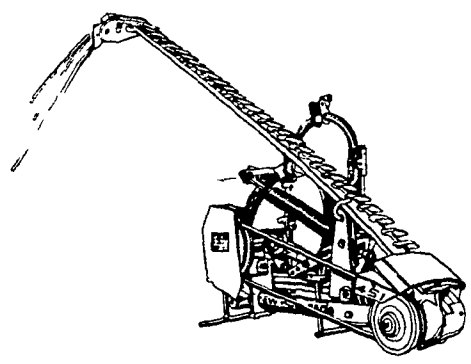


With the self-propelled Model 1495 Haybine® mower-conditioner, the unique 12' Rolareel™ header picks up crop in the worst field conditions and feeds it directly into 9'2" rubber, intermeshing conditioning rolls.

Your choice of either windrow or swath, gas or Diesel power and planetary or hydrostatic drive



The Model 847 round baler makes bales weighing up to 850 pounds. You have three tying choices — manual, hydraulic and Auto-Wrap And you'll get sure, fast core formation. Super-Sweep pickup and fines saver pans get more hay in every bale See how easy it is to put up tons of hay in a day with a Sperry New Holland round baler Ask us for a demonstration.



The Model 451 pitmanless mower mounts on most 3-point tractors faster than tractor brands — and without special hitches! Built-in adjustable skids replace hazardous jacks, stands or blocks when disconnecting. Double guards are forged and heat-treated to penetrate fine grasses and down, tangled crops.

CHOOSE THE PROGRAM TO SUIT YOUR NEEDS

1. WAIVER OF FINANCE — TO JANUARY 1, 1983

OR

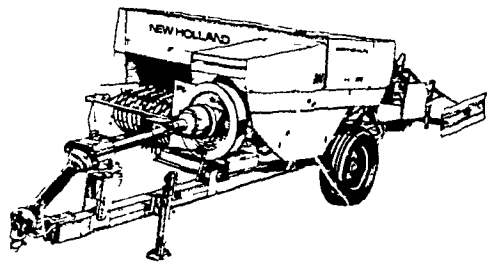
2. CASH FOR CASH - IF YOU PAY CASH WE'LL GIVE YOU A BONUS REFUND OF 5% OF THE AMOUNT OF CASH PAID TO THE DEALER

OR

3. NO INTEREST FINANCING - PUT 30% DOWN ON ANY NEW HAY TOOL AND WE'LL FINANCE THE BALANCE FOR A YEAR WITH TWELVE EQUAL PRINCIPLE PAYMENTS AND NO INTEREST.

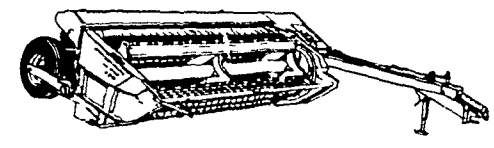
4. LEASING - A VARIETY OF PLANS DESIGNED TO SUIT YOUR DOWN PAYMENT AND SCHEDULE NEEDS.

SEE ONE OF THE SPERRY NEW HOLLAND DEALERS FOR A GREAT HAY TOOLS DEAL!



Stop in and get a great deal on the Sperry New Holland Model 315 baler. This 14" x 18" baler is built extra rugged to handle tough crops. It's designed to work hard and give years of dependable service.

Now's the time to buy because we're moving our complete stock of hay tools.



Full-width conditioning rolls in the Model 489 Haybine® mower-conditioner are located in the main frame, not the header The lighter header responds quicker to ground contours and greatly reduces knife and guard damage The "489" is designed for operators who demand the very best

The Model 1038 is the bale wagon that picks up, loads, hauls, stacks, retrieves and even single bale unloads into a mow conveyor or feed bunk The '1038' handles both 14' x 18" and 16' x 18' bales up to 4 tons per load Come in and get more details about this remarkable machine

STAYS ON THE RIGHT TRACK.

Its seat is mounted to the side, so you can follow the track. And the Kubota L245HC (High Clearance) diesel tractor stands 22" off the ground. That makes it ideal for row crops such as vegetables and tobacco.

Standard features include a 25 hp 3-cylinder diesel engine, and 8 forward and 2 reverse speeds. Plus dual independent hydraulic systems, and a Category I, 3-point hitch, rear PTO powers tillers, sprayers, and mowers.

For high clearance work, there are specialized cultivators and a fertilizer side-dresser. The Kubota L245HC is your chance to rise above it all, while staying on the right track.

China-U.S. soybean symposium

WASHINGTON, D.C. — An 11-member Chinese delegation will present technical papers and exchange information on soybean cultivation with U.S. soybean experts at a symposium sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, next week.

The symposium is designed to develop a better understanding of soybean genetics, breeding, biology, crop production and processing in both countries, according to Joan S. Wallace, administrator of USDA's Office of International Cooperation and Development.

"One of the major objectives," she said, "will be to develop mutually-beneficial, cooperative scientific programs between U.S. and Chinese soybean scientists."

A follow-up symposium is scheduled to take place in China in 1983 with the Chinese as hosts, Wallace said.

China is the native home of the soybean and has an abundance of virtually untapped germplasm pools that can be used to improve soybean productivity and resistance to disease, Wallace said. Farmers in the United States planted some 68 million acres of soybeans in 1981 which produced about 2.03 billion bushels. About one-half of the production was exported to foreign countries, Wallace said.

We expect farm and agribusiness leaders from throughout the midwest to take part in the symposium. Several Chinese soybean specialists currently studying in the United States will also participate.

The Chinese delegation will arrive in the United States today. The Chinese scientists will participate in 10 days of workshops following the symposium, attend the American Soybean Association meeting in Minneapolis Aug. 6-9, and make selected visits to private agricultural businesses, research facilities and farms prior to departure from New York Aug. 12.

Sullivan youth wins safety award

UNIVERSITY PARK — Susan Weisbrod, 17, of R1, Lopez, has compiled an outstanding record in 4-H work and was named state safety winner in the National Awards Program.

Susan will receive an expense-paid trip to the National 4-H Congress.

Support of the safety program is provided by General Motors Foundation, Inc.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene W. Weisbrod, Susan will be a senior this fall at Sullivan County High School. She has been a 4-H member for nine years.

A member of the Riflests 4-H Club and the Krazy Krafters 4-H Club, she has served as vice president, secretary, treasurer, and teen leader.

Susan has completed 4-H projects in riflery, crafts, and safety.

Locally, she has taken part in day camp, round-up, demonstrations, a leader's dinner, teen retreat, and local government seminar.

The state safety winner also has participated in state rifle team competition and Pennsylvania 4-H Leadership Congress.

Susan Weisbrod

Commenting on the values of the educational youth program, Susan said: "Without 4-H I would have missed out on a lot of the knowledge I've gained and experiences I've had over the last nine years."

Venango youth earns poultry award

UNIVERSITY PARK — Kimberley Kelly, 18, of R1, Harrisville, who has compiled an outstanding record in 4-H work, was named a state winner for her poultry project.

She will be eligible to attend the National 4-H Congress in Chicago.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Kelly, Jr., Kimberley has been a 4-H member for 10 years.

A member of the Pone Hill Star Trackers 4-H Club and the Venango County 4-H Exchange Club, she has served as president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, and news reporter. She also assists as a junior leader for forestry, geology, and arts and crafts projects.

Kimberley Kelly

Kimberley completed 4-H projects in poultry, bantams, ducks, rabbit production, pet care, baking, sewing, photography, rocketry, forestry, geology, and crocheting.

Locally, she has taken part in county council activities, 4-H super club, beautification day, county fair, Rural Life Sunday, teen leaders retreat, and a citizenship retreat.

Kimberley also participated in State 4-H Capital Days, Pennsylvania 4-H Leadership Congress, Farm Show, and State 4-H Achievement Days.

Commenting on the values of the educational youth program, Kimberley said: "4-H has taught me that, the harder you work for something the more likely you are to achieve it."

Wyoming Co. youth wins forestry award

UNIVERSITY PARK — Vince Sickler, 16, of R1, Falls, has been named state forestry contest winner in the 1982 4-H National Awards Program.

He will receive an expense-paid trip to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago.

Support of the 4-H forestry program is provided by International Paper Company.

The son of Mildred Sickler, Vince will be a senior this fall at Wyoming Area High School. He has been a 4-H member for five years.

A member of the Falls Flyers 4-H Club, he has served as president, vice president, and teen leader.

The state forestry winner completed 4-H projects in wildlife, forestry, vegetable gardening, archery, bicycle safety, fire safety, arts and crafts, and photography.

Vince has participated in teen retreats, a regional leader's forum, Citizenship... Washington Focus, State 4-H Capital Days, and 4-H Achievement Days.

Vince Sickler

Vince said: "By being able to go places and meet new friends, 4-H has made it possible to learn from them. I feel I am a more understanding person as a result of my 4-H experiences."

Two win from Westmoreland County

UNIVERSITY PARK — Two Westmoreland County young adults have been named state contest winners.

Named were Karen Gaiter, 16, of 104 Carpenter Street, Greensburg, state winner in nutrition development, and Mary Laughlin, 19, of R3, Blairsville, winner in the achievement program.

Both 4-H'ers will be eligible to attend National 4-H Congress in Chicago.

Support of the achievement program is supported by the Ford Motor Company Fund.

Karen Gaiter

Mary Laughlin

KAREN GAITER

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Gaiter, Karen will be a junior this fall at Greensburg Salem High School. A member of the Anitoch 4-H Nutrition Club, she has served as secretary and teasurer.

Karen has participated in the Westmoreland County Fair and was a teen leader for 4-H Day Camp. Last year, she took part in State 4-H Achievement Days as a member of the physical fitness team.

Commenting on the values of the educational youth program, she said: "4-H has helped me meet more people and taught me how to get along with them."

MARY LAUGHLIN

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer C. Laughlin, Mary is a sophomore at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, majoring in health and physical education. She has been a 4-H member for 10 years.

A member of the Sugarloaf Community Agricultural 4-H Club, Stoney Run Horse Club, and Keystone Home Economics Club, she has served as president, vice president, secretary, and news reporter. She also assisted with club activities and events as a junior leader.

Mary completed projects in swine, horsemanship, clothing, flower gardening, wildlife, macrame, junior leadership, and animal science.

Locally, she has taken part in project tours, officer training, horse round-ups, achievement night activities, and county council.

Mary also participated in State 4-H Capital Days, Pennsylvania 4-H Leadership Congress, Farm Show, State 4-H Horse Show, and State 4-H Achievement Days.

Wollaston receives award

UNIVERSITY PARK — Charles T. Wollaston, of Maple Lawn Farm, Toughkenamon, today was named state winner of the 1982 Pennsylvania 4-H Alumni Recognition Award.

According to Carroll L. Howes, associate 4-H youth program director at Penn State, Wollaston will receive a plaque and compete for an alumni recognition award at the national level.

Wollaston was selected from among the quarter-million Pennsylvania 4-H alumni. Support of the alumni recognition program is provided by the Friends of 4-H Council.

A former Chester County 4-H'er, this year's alumni winner has been active in dairy club work as a member and adult leader for more than 30 years. As a club member,

Charles Wollaston

he was involved in "farm projects," which included dairy, pigs, capons, bees and gardening. His first appearance at the Pennsylvania Farm Show was a 4-H capon project in 1941.

Bug damage in one state may help farmers in another

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Can knowing about alfalfa weevil damage in Missouri help farmers in Illinois plan for pest control? Probably, say plant pest experts at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"We're set up a pest survey system to encourage communication among state and federal insect, weed and plant disease experts, and also to detect invasions of foreign insects before they've had a chance to spread," said Ron Johnson, coordinator of the new nationwide survey and detection system for USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

"Previously, each state had its own system of surveying for crop pests, operated either through its land-grant college, Extension system or department of agriculture," said Johnson. "Now we're helping the states standardize their methods so they'll be better able to use each other's data."

Johnson said the newly organized system also will help USDA in its role of protecting American agriculture from foreign plant pests.

"We'll have many more state and federal people out there looking in a standardized way for pests," Johnson said. "And USDA will also be getting data on exotic insects, weeds and plant diseases in which we're especially interested."

Larry Landis gives new meaning to diversification

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

PARKESBURG — Larry Landis, of R2 Parkesburg, gives new meaning to the term diversification.

The variety of his many interests would rival the most diversified of farms that mix all kinds of livestock and cropping practices under one operation.

And, Larry has accumulated this diversification in just the short span of his 18 years.

Among the diversified interests, accomplishments and goals of the Chester County farm youth and graduate of the FFA program at Octorara High School are:

–A full four years of FFA activities that have brought numerous awards that literally coat the walls of his bedroom, ranging from numerous committee posts and top citrus salesman to Star Chapter Farmer, the DeKalb Award and honors as top senior ag student.

–A collection of antique toys, many agricultural in nature, that would make the most avid dealer or collector drool in envy. The collection took the Best of Show Award at this year's Lancaster Optimist Hobby Show.

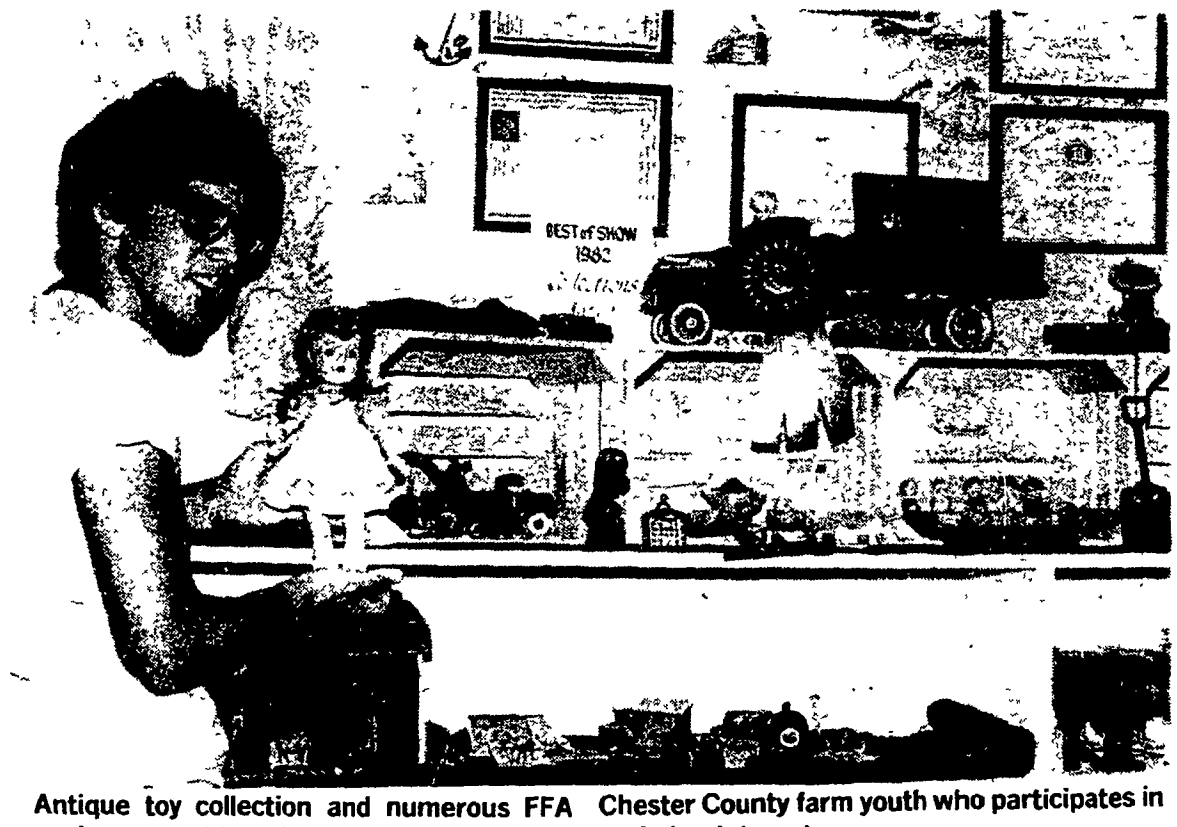
–A grower of Indian corn that has turned another of his FFA projects into a full-scale family craft business.

–A restorer of larger antiques, including a 1941 Farmall H tractor that chugs and putters along as rhythmically as when it first came off the dealer's lot more than four decades ago.

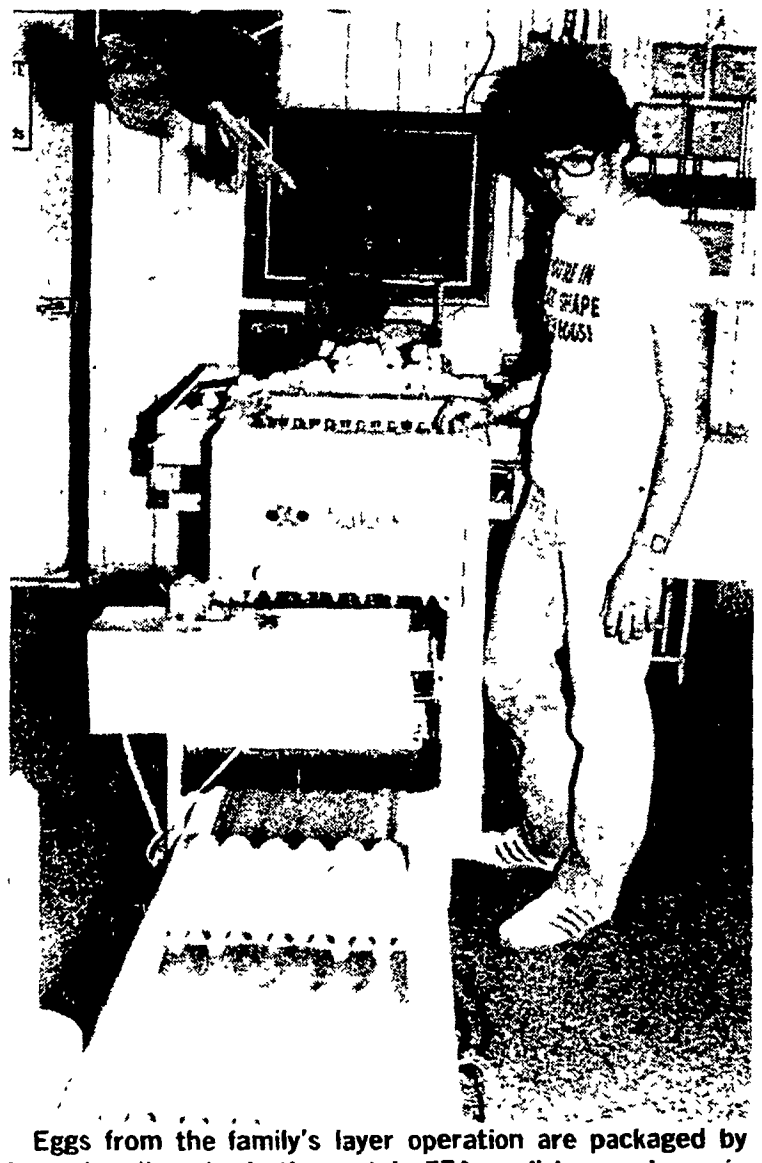
–A model builder of intricate detail such as found in the miniature copy of the laying house found on the family's Cackle Berry Egg Farm, which is complete even to the toy Pennfield truck parked next to the rambling red structure.

–And that poultry house – the real one not the model – accounts for yet another FFA honor, Larry's winning of the state proficiency award for poultry production.

"Larry has been an excellent student throughout his FFA years," explain his instructors and advisor at Octorara, Ivan Stauffer and Frank Wasco.



Antique toy collection and numerous FFA awards are combined in the decorating theme of the room of Larry Landis, R2 Parkesburg, Chester County farm youth who participates in varied ag interests.



Eggs from the family's layer operation are packaged by Larry Landis, who is the state's FFA proficiency winner in poultry production.

"He has been one of our most involved students and gives everything to all of his projects no matter what they are. His selection for the top senior ag award and the state proficiency in poultry production prove his deep interest and involvement."

Larry's poultry project included 6,647 birds out of the family's total 45,600-layer operation.

"I had to keep complete records on the birds, including feeding costs, production, mortality and other costs," Larry explained.

"My feed costs were 22 cents per dozen eggs produced and the year's production was 269.8 eggs per hen housed. The mortality turned out to be 7.69 percent."

Electrical and rental costs had to be kept, too.

Larry now moves on to regional competition, facing other state winners at the Eastern States Exposition next month.

The youth's antique toy collection ranges from tiny cars, trucks, tractors and implements to a wood barnyard set. There's even a Madame Alexander doll. One of the more unusual toys is a set of rolling blocks, which form six different farm animal scenes, one for each side of the blocks.

"Many of the toys were handed down through the family," Larry said.

"Some were from my parents and even from my grandparents."

This 1941 Farmall H tractor was restored in Octorara High School vo-ag shop by Larry Landis under supervision of instructors, Ivan Stauffer, left, and Frank Wasco.

No matter if it's miniature ag antiques or the full-sized variety, Larry's interest doesn't diminish one bit.

"I bought the 1941 Farmall H as a used tractor back in 1953," Milton Landis, Larry's father, said.

"I remember I paid $1,200 for the tractor, cultivators and manure spreader. We used the tractor up until 1968."

The tractor was restored by Larry in the Octorara ag shop.

The 72-acre Landis farm, located along Rt. 30 a few miles inside Chester County, is now rented out and the family concentrates on egg production. Next year, Larry's responsibility will increase to 15,000 birds, about one third of the flock.

Starting about Labor Day, the entire family devotes most of their evenings to a mutual craft project.

"Starting about six years ago, we began making dolls out of our Indian corn," Mrs. Landis said.

"Last year, we made about 700 dolls and sold them here at the farm."

The Landis family utilizes almost the entire corn plant in making the doll. Four ears are used for the arms and legs. The husks are used in making the face and body and the silk forms the hair. Brightly colored cloth is used for the clothing and other accessories.

And the efficiency of Larry Landis' diversification is so complete that he has even found a use for Lancaster Farming in this family craft project.

"We use newspaper to form the stuffing for the dolls and cover it with the husks," he said.

"Lancaster Farming is just the right size to crumple up."

Well, it beats the bottom of a bird cage, a puppy training area or other spots in which a used newspaper can end up.

The Cackle-Berry Farm of Landis family, including Larry and his parents, Thelma and Milton, features ag products, ranging from eggs to Indian corn dolls, which are hand crafted on the farm, located along Rt. 30 east of Gap.

Phila. FFA elects officers

PHILADELPHIA — Ira D. Zinner, president, heads the new contingent of officers of the Philadelphia FFA Chapter at Walter Biddle Saul High School.

Other officers include:

The chapter now numbers more than 650 members.

Michele and Jackie King York Springs; Angie Hawn, Hunterstown/New Chester and Kris Ruppert, Heidlersburg were also selected Adams County's representatives to Regional 4-H Fashion Revue.

Adams 4-H'ers in fashion

During the judging period, Helen D. Tunison, Extension home economist gave an illustrated talk on 4-H Fashion Revue through the 25 years. Fashion Revue is a 4-H event planned to build self-confidence and poise, to develop leadership, as well as to learn life long skills.

The only state winner during this 25 year period, Audrey (Wolf) Weikel, was on hand as a senior judge. Her prize winning garments were on display.

Kathy McFadden, Gettysburg; Lori Legg, Hunterstown/New Chester; Rhonda Weigle, and Tina Renoll, Heidlersburg were selected Adams County's representatives to Regional 4-H Fashion Revue, this past week at Messiah College, Grantham.

Too many first-time gardeners, anxious for their reward, begin their harvest before vegetables are ripe and most flavorful. On the other hand, experienced gardeners may tend to let their vegetables over-ripen on the premise that bigger is better. The secret to harvesting success is not too late, not too early — but just as vegetables are at their flavorful best.

To help you get the best flavor from your garden, here are some harvesting suggestions for popular garden vegetables.

Broccoli

Harvest broccoli when the head stops growing. Cut the bunch before the bad clusters spread out. As long as the buds are tight the flavor will be good. Once the buds spread and turn yellow, the flavor will turn quite strong.

Cabbage

Harvest as soon as heads start to form or when wanted. Flavor will not change much with the age of cabbage.

Carrots

Carrots picked that are more than 1½ inches in diameter will be woody. Harvest small, young carrots now. Let some grow to full size to keep on hand for use all winter.

Cauliflower

Like broccoli, cauliflower should be harvested when the head is tightly grouped. If you want a clean, white head tie the plant's outer leaves up around the head as soon as it starts to form.

Corn

Corn at the peak of its flavor will be sweet and juicy. But if it goes beyond its prime, it will turn starchy. To check for maturity, carefully peel back the husk to expose a couple of inches of kernels. Puncture a kernel with your nail. If the fluid is watery, wait a few days. If it is milky, the corn is just right. If it is more like a paste, the corn is too starchy and best saved for canning.

Cucumbers

As soon as they reach about three inches, cukes are ready to pick. Pick as much as you want and you'll greatly increase your yield. But don't let them get too large.

Eggplant

Let color be your guide. Harvest when they develop a sheen, and pick before they get soft.

Green Beans

With green beans watch internal developments more than exterior pod size. The best guide to optimum maturity is seed-size development. You'll want to pick them when pods reach full size but before seeds get too large.

Green Leafy Vegetables

The younger you pick them, the better and sweeter the crop will be. Pick the outer leaves first and harvest often. It is better to enjoy the crop than to let the plants become bitter. Pick in early morning, this tends to delay wilting.

Onions

When you pick immature onions, you'll have "green onions". Harvest small bulbs as you need them throughout the summer. When the tops begin to dry and fall over, you'll know it's harvest time. Dig up the onions and let them sit in the sun several days to dry before storage.

Peppers

Once firm and green, peppers are ready to pick. Although the bigger they grow, the thicker the skin will get. If allowed to stay on the vine, they will turn red but not hot in taste.

Radishes

Start picking radishes when they are the size of a small acorn. They will be tasty until they reach about one inch in diameter. After that they will split and become spongy and strong flavored.

Squash

There are basically two classifications of squash: summer and winter. The key to harvesting a squash is its skin. Summer squash is ripe when the rind is easily penetrated by your nail. Winter squash, with its hard shell, resists pressure. Since squash are such great producers you can experiment with harvesting at different stages of growth. Test which sizes have the most desirable flavor. Squash may grow to large sizes but in general, squash are tastiest when in the small to medium size range.

Tomatoes

Pick at full color. After the first pink shows, the fruit will reach full color in about five days. The longer they stay on the vine, the better they get, but pick them before they start to soften. In the fall, pick all remaining fruits before the first frost and ripen in a dark area at 60° to 70°F.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Farm women - the perfect 10.

That was the message on a button we were each given at a farm women's meeting I recently attended. It was also the theme of the meeting, which devoted most of the day-long program to farm women's involvement in their operations, their homes, and their communities.

Before the day was ended, I'd come up with a second button to take home. I knew full well that, if everyone else was a one-button perfect 10, it would take me at least two to ever begin convincing the farmer that I'd come close to that goal of perfection.

Frankly, it's a hopeless case.

My wish that I could be a more perfect assistant in the milking barn has almost vanhished since my hands have taken up rebelling against rubber hoses and chlorine.

Once, I thought I was pretty capable at the few field jobs I was given, lugging the disk, occasionally the rake, (almost never the ejector-baler). Circumstances now have promoted me to head broom-operator in the feed alleys of the dairy barn.

My perfect-10 bookkeeping comes to an abrupt halt each month when the checking account statement arrives and the inevitable disagreement of figures ensues.

A housekeeping job of perfection totally flew out the window the day I wed a farmer, and vanished forever when we added two youngsters - and whatever cats manage to sneak in with them - to the household.

Even the garden is uncooperative. A perfect-10's garden would never have thistles in the onions, hornworms grinning from the tomatoes, or zucchini plants that mysteriously perish in the night. We've had too many zucchini already, anyway.

So, I shall wistfully wear my two perfect-10 buttons, thinking of them as a far-off dream, as likely to ever be attained as my someday traveling to Jupiter or Venus.

But, there's one consolation. A perfect-10 farm wife would surely deserve a perfect-10 husband.

No comment.

Penn Willow 4-H meets

CONESTOGA — The Penn Willow 4-H Club met at the Pequea Recreational Park on Friday, July 17 for a covered dish picnic.

For entertainment, the Rocketry Club launched the rockets they had made.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We are on the road again. After waiting a few days at my sister's home in Michigan, we were finally told by our insurance company that our car was not repairable. They wanted to sell it to a salvage company for fifty dollars. We had just put four new radial tires on it worth many times that figure.

We had a choice of taking a plane home or buying another car. From my opening sentence you know what we decided. Allen studies the maps and plans the day's schedule and we take turns driving. On Sunday we attended the United Church of Christ in Iowa City as it was holding services when we arrived there.

The fields of corn and soybeans are much large than Lancaster County fields. In both Illinois and Iowa it was very wet and water lay in the fields for five days after a heavy rain. They pastured beef cows and sheep in the same field.

While driving through western South Dakota and Wyoming we saw many round and square hay bales along the road as they bale along the right-of-way. The ranches in central Wyoming are set so far back from the road that we couldn't see the buildings—just the dusty roads leading through barren and grassless terrain.

We drove through part of the Rosebud Indian Reservation on our way to see Mount Rushmore. A thunderstorm was threatening but several thousand people sat in an open amphitheater to watch a program climaxed by the floodlighting of the giant sculpture. Washington, Jefferson, Roosevelt and Lincoln were completed after 14 years and nearly one million dollars. They are 400 feet up on a mountain and Washington's face is 60 feet high and his nose is 21 feet long.

They were a completely different sight than the Badlands of South Dakota that we traveled through all afternoon. The Badlands are a wonderland of bizarre, colorful spires and pinnacles with deep gorges. Today we visited an abandoned gold mine and saw people panning for gold. Then while driving through Custer State Park we were treated to a close up view of a herd of buffalo which ambled across the road in front of us. Tomorrow, Yellowstone National Park.

Farm women societies

Lancaster Co. Society 3

Lancaster Farm Women 3 and their families met for a picnic at the Sunny Craft Farm of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Stauffer of R3 Ephrata, on July 18.

Dale Long, recipient of the $300 scholarship presented by the Society, attended the meeting.

Dale is a graduate of Warwick High School and will be studying forestry at the Williamsport Area Community College.

Lancaster Co. Society 7

Lancaster Farm Women 7 met at Paradise Park with their families for a picnic, recently.

About 30 members and guests attended.

Lancaster Co. Society 20

Members voted to help with a sno-cone booth at the 4-H fair.

Berks Society 1

Berks Farm Women 1 met with their families at the Fleetwood home of Mrs. R. Gordon Yorgey for a hot dog roast.

Members are planning to take a bus trip to the National Aquarium in Baltimore on September 9. They also will visit the Railroad Museum and the World Trade Center.

A food stand is planned for July 24 at the Hunter Clauser sale in Oley.

The annual picnic for all members and their families will be held Sunday, August 15, at Levengood's Grove in Amityville.

The next meeting will be held August 11 at the home of Mrs. John Snyder of Limekiln.

Fulton grange 66

OAKRYN — Fulton Grange 66 met at the Grange Hall recently, here.

Members were informed that the national grange will meet in Providence, Rhode Island from November 8 to 14.

Tommy Peirson of Media will present a magic show at the next meeting, on Monday, July 26.

The annual picnic will be held August 9 on the Grange Hall grounds. Community night will be held September 27.

Dairy princesses attend Tri-State seminar

TOWSON, Md. — Dairy Princesses from Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware and West Virginia attended the 11th Annual Tri-State Training Seminar, July 6 and 7, at the University of Delaware, in Newark.

The 25 princesses, alternates and princess candidates participated in workshops on nutrition, public speaking, poise makeup and skincare and other topics designed to help them better promote milk and dairy products.

Adult representatives from dairy promotion committees, in each state, also participated in their own workshop to share ideas about dairy promotion.

The Tri-State Dairy Princess Seminar was sponsored by the Atlantic Dairy Association, a promotion organization funded by dairy farmers.

Local 4-H'ers join regional night

LANCASTER — Seventeen Lancaster County 4-H'ers took part in regional 4-H night at Mechanicsburg, on July 8.

Winning a first place for her demonstration "Design with tropical plants," was Stacy Nestleroth from the Elm-Penryn 4-H club.

The junior demonstration team of Melissa and Michelle Harris from the Mastersonville Club received red ribbons for their "Watergate Salad."

Brenda Aument of the Solanco Club, placed fourth in the public speaking contest.

Dairy bowl participants were: Dave Stoner Landisville; Joe Rohrer, Lancaster; Ed Good, Landisville; and Dave Landis, Lancaster.

Clothes judging members were Wanda Hershey, Manheim; Rhonda Witmer, Lititz; Jodi Wenger, Ephrata; Donna Rohrer, Lampeter; and Sue Buckwalter, Ephrata.

WAYNE SWEET BULKY

MEANS MORE MILK!

Let's face it. Milk cow rations aren't always the most appetizing. Even though properly supplemented nutritionally, the ingredients are concentrated to get profitable milk production. Boost milk output, pep up appetites, add variety and tempting tastiness with Wayne Sweet Bulky. Sweet with molasses, bulky with beet pulp, it's fed mixed, top-fed or straight (for cows on high-quality, high-protein legume roughages). Great as a dry cow or heifer conditioner. Does a good low-cost job when hot weather dulls appetities or pastures day up.

Feed for the difference innovations make. Feed Wayne.

Wild horses roll in and out of York adoption farm

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

LEWISBERRY — Scanning a Harrisburg newspaper one day last December, Lewisberry horse trainer and beef farmer Frank Goodlander spotted an article on the federal Bureau of Land Management's Adopt-A-Horse program. According to the release, the BLM was interested in locating an adoption center for wild horses and burros in the Northeast, preferably in southern Pennsylvania or northern Maryland.

After an initial January meeting with BLM officials and some three hundred other prospects interested in operating such a facility, Goodlander and his wife Doris were among three or four dozen candidates selected to submit a cost and technical proposal and bid.

"We spent about two solid months working on it. Doris put together the cost part while I worked the technical end," grins the tall, rugged farmer, who looks the part of a cowboy in his broad, leather hat.

"We had an eight-pound stack of paper in the proposal when it was completed," he chuckles.

In late May, the Goodlanders received word they'd been the low bidders, and won the $340,585 three-year contract. They had six weeks to put up the facility before the July 15 opening date. It rained steadily the first two weeks.

But in the spirit of barn-raising, neighbors and friends turned out, hammers in hands. When the first trailer bringing the initial shipment of 141 animals lumbered up the long lane, past the large pond and the picturesque stone house, final details were about completed.

Goodlander is quick to hand plaudits for encouragement and technical assistance to York County Extension livestock specialist Tony Dobrosky who "was the greatest in giving us the general idea of what was needed, and seeing details that we didn't see."

Penn State Extension horse specialist Jim Gallagher also added input to the design, which had to be constructed to meet BLM specifications.

Similar to the popular Virginia-type heifer-raising structures the facility features a roofed-over main alleyway, 240 feet long, and closed on one side. Six spacious holding pens open out of the other side, each containing 6,000 square feet. Each horse must be guaranteed 200 square feet of space, and each burro, 100 square feet. Sturdy feeding troughs and hay racks divide the holding pens from the alleyway, where all feeding, movement of animals, and even manure handling, is done. No gates are allowed on the outside of the facility.

Mentally prepared to cope with wild, off-the-range horses, the Goodlanders have been pleased with the response of their temporary charges.

"I've been surprised at how they've handled," comments Goodlander. "I thought they'd be more difficult to work with. They were really pretty wild on Tuesday, but by opening day, two days later, they were already gentling down."

And, a week later, Goodlander reports some of the skittish stallions were already responding by allowing him to gently touch them.

Goodlander's been handling and training horses for many years, along with running the Hereford beef herd they maintain, and cropping the 138-acre farm not far from Ski Roundup. Although she's a "city girl" from Harrisburg, Doris says that, while her introduction to farm living came late in life, she's found her niche and is thoroughly happy working with animals.

Adopt-A-Horse center operator Frank Goodlander checks a few of the wild horses corralled at the Lewisberry facility as they wait to be picked up by private individuals who'll haul the animals to their permanent homes. Strict guidelines govern the purchase of animals by their adopters.

Son Douglas, along with two other full-time employees, will be helping to run the adoption center. Doug, however, will return in September to his Penn State studies in animal science and agronomy, with a student teaching stint scheduled in the fall and an eventual goal of a veterinary license.

Since the July 15 opening day, the facility has been a "madhouse," with adopters from as far away as New York and West Virginia running a steady stream of trailers up the lane, just a few miles west of the Lewisberry Exit 13 of Interstate 83.

Accessibility to a major highway was one of the reasons the center went to the Goodlanders, according to Steve Altman, BLM information specialist who was on hand, along with dozens of officials, for the center's opening ceremony. During the brief July 15 ceremony, BLM Associate Director James Parker called the program a "unique one" that provides good homes for horses and burros that overpopulate Western lands.

Amidst a stampede of other officials, politicians, reporters, cameras, microphones and dozens of well-wishers and would-be adopters, the first three burros jumped aboard the trailer of George Washburn, Hudson, New York, who'd won the fist-pick drawing.

Penn State's Dean of Agriculture Samuel Smith, left, was among the dozens of elected and ag-related officials on hand to congratulate Doris and Frank Goodlander as their equine adoption center opened for business.

Altmas says that BLM expects to relocate an estimated 4,000 horses and burros to Northeastern adopters over the three years of the contract, which may be renewed, or awarded to another applicant at its expiration.

Goodlanders' Lewisberry farm facility is just the second adoption center east of the Mississippi. The only other one in the eastern part of the country is at Cross Plains, Tennessee, which has placed 4,000 animals since its opening in July 1979. Distance to that center has been prohibitive to interested adopters in the northeastern part of the country.

Adopt-A-Horse programs first went on-line in 1976, the culmination of 1971 legislation aimed at protecting wild horses on public lands.

Because they had no natural predators, over several decades the horse and burro populations had grown so large that rangelands were threatened by severe overgrazing. Irrate sheep and cattle herders, plus hunters who shot horses for sale to pet food processors, cut back on the wild horse population to the point where, in 1971, only an estimated 17,000 remained.

In response to environmental concern over eventual extinction of the species, the Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act made the animals government property, and protected by law.

To maintain a balance between the wild horses and the domestic grazing herds, the adoption program was devised. Over 38,000 horses and burros have been placed since its beginning.

"If homes are not found for the wild horses and burros," says Altman, "the law decrees they must be destroyed in the most humane and cost-efficient way. It's to the credit of the program, and Burros awaiting adoption from the Lewisberry center are rounded up from southern California and Arizona, — most of them descendants of pack animals used by early Spanish explorers, gold prospectors and early settlers.

On hand to officially open the Adopt-A-Horse center was Bureau of Land Management's associate director James M. Parker. Others sharing the temporary stage were: from left, Mrs. Parker, G. Curtis Jones, Jr., BLM's eastern states director, and state Deputy Secretary of Agriculture J. Luther Snyder.

York District holds planning meeting

YORK — The York County Conservation District recently held its annual planning meeting to determine 1983 conservation goals and objectives.

Several county-wide organizations, including the York County Farmer's Association, York County Farmer's Union, and the Izaak Walton League were represented as well as the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Pa. Bureau of Forestry, Pa. Bureau of Soil and Water Conservation, York County Planning Commission, and municipal officials.

According to Albert Bentz, chairman of the Conservation District, "The participation and input from these organizations were excellent." Some of the topics discussed at the planning meeting were land use, water resources, erosion and sedimentation control, education and youth, and public relations.

Leon Lankford, Dover Township manager, commented, "It is very important for the Conservation District to provide information on prime and important farmlands to local municipalities so that local people will be better prepared to make landuse decisions."

Bill Conn, York County Planning Commission, advised that "There is a great need to get information on storm water management to the more rural townships who will be facing increased development in the coming years." He stressed that the more local officials know about the stormwater management problems created through development, the better prepared they will be to implement solutions to the problems.

Jack Dahoff, of the Farmer's Association, said there is a need to encourage farmers to control the water that runs off their farm fields through the use of soil and water conservation practices. Dahoff noted that York County farmers are among the most conservation-minded farmers there are, but added theree is always room for improvement. No-till farming was also a topic of discussion.

Riggs Harwell, SCS, and John Smith, County Agricultural Agent, related that no-till farming is on the increase in York County. Both Jack Dahoff and Frank Goodlander of the York County Farmer's Union expressed concern over proper management in no-till farming. Education on contour stripcropping and fall covercropping in no-till systems was suggested as a goal for the District.

Terry Eberly, Izaak Walton League, commented that one resource the District might want to tap in their conservation efforts is the large number of boy and girl Scouts who are willing to provide help in York County.

According to Linda Houseal, District manager, "The comments made at the annual planning meeting will be taken into consideration by the Conservation District's Board of Directors and will be utilized as the Directors develop the District's plan of action for 1983."

She also said that other farmers and residents of York County who are concerned about the soil and water conservation efforts in York County are encouraged to voice their concerns and ideas to the County Conservation District by writing to the District at 118 Pleasant Acres Road, York PA 17402.

Pa. broiler placements down

HARRISBURG — Placements of broiler chicks in the Commonwealth during the week ending July 10 were 2,335,000 according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

The placements were fractionally below the corresponding week a year ago and four percent below the previous week. Average placements during the past nine weeks were one percent above last year.

Placements in the 19 key poultry producing states were 83,931,000, fractionally below the previous week but two percent above the same week a year earlier. Average placements in the key states during the past nine weeks were fractionally above a year ago.

Broiler-fryers slaughtered in Pennsylvania under federal inspection during the week ending June 30 totaled 1,992,000, with an average liveweight of 4.14 pounds.

those who adopt them, that we've never had to destroy any. They've virtually all been placed through Adopt-A-Horse."

Horses to be placed through the Lewisberry facility will come primarily from Wyoming, Nevada and eastern Oregon, while the burros are mainly removed from lands in southern California and Arizona.

After rounding up in the West, they're Coggins tested and paste wormed, then innoculated against equine encephalitis, tetanus, rhinopneumonitis and influenza. Cost to the adopter is based on the expense of gathering, vet care, feed and transportation.

A horse from the Lewisberry center will cost the adopter $290, and a burro is $140. Unweaned foals are never separated from their mothers, and go with the mare or jenny at no additional charge.

Animals remain the property of the U.S. government for the first year, and cannot later be transferred without written permission of the Bureau.

Interested would-be adopters are asked to write for details and an application form to: Adopt-A-Horse, Bureau of Land Management, 350 South Pickett Street, Alexandria, VA 22304, with applications now being accepted for adoptions through the Lewisberry facility.

And Frank and Doris Goodlander look forward to the next three years of introducing animals and adopters. The fifteen pounds Goodlander lost slipping through the mud, rushing to finish the center on time, has been replaced with a warm feeling as delighted families, some from several hundred miles away, pick up their adopted equines and lend a hand in preserving the heritage of the Old West.

Ag Progress Days highlights the "growing business"

UNIVERSITY PARK — Last year's Penn State Ag Progress Days attracted a record 75,000 visitors. Final preparations are underway for this year's event, Aug. 24-26 at the Penn State Rock Springs Research Center.

"We're growing better," says Joseph Harrington, Penn State agronomy professor and general chairman of Ag Progress Days. "It's reflected in our theme this year, 'Agriculture...The Growing Busines,' and it sums up how we feel about research at Penn State and the show. Each year we get a little better."

Ag Progress Days is one of the largest agricultural exhibitions in the East. Harrington says that a random survey of 1,500 visitors last year found that 98 percent said they liked what they saw and would be back this year.

"We were delighted to find that so many people were pleased with the show," says Harrington. "We're still going to work on making the event even better. This is our chance to show the public what Penn State is doing."

There will be over $20 million worth of farm products, equipment and the latest commercial machinery on display. That machinery won't just be sitting idle either. There will be demonstrations of the equipment under actual field conditions.

Penn State faculty, knowledgebale in areas including ornamental plants, vegetable and fruit production, home grounds and insect problems, turf grass, ag preservation, soil management, small scale agriculture, and others will be on hand in the College of Ag tent ready to answer questions.

A popular permanent attraction is the Pasto Ag Museum. The museum contains over 250 antique items. Just reconditioned for this year's show is a 1902 triple-jointed, hand-operated sheep shearer. One person turns the crank while another shears the sheep. The museum also includes a hand-operated washing machine, cream separators, and many antique tractor implements.

This year's theatre will feature a variety of home and garden related presentations on stage all three days, such as auto repair for amateurs, ice cream making, quilting, bicycle safety and maintenance, and caring for the family pet. Nature lovers won't want to miss Shaver Creek Nature Center's presentations on birds of prey and reptiles and amphibians. Down-home, toe-tappin' blue grass music also will be included each day for your enjoyment.

The midway area will focus on educational exhibits and field equipment. A woodlot tour will show forest management practices, timber harvesting techniques, and logging equipment.

Dairy and livestock exhibits will zero in on animal nutrition and housing. A variety of animals will be housed in the dairy and livestock tent, including the African blue duiker. This is an endangered species of antelope that look like tiny foot tall deer. They may provide some new insights into animal digestion.

Ag Progress Days is an educational event for consumers and producers sponsored by the Penn State's College of Agriculture. There are no charges for admission or parking. The show is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday and 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Wednesday. The location is just nine miles southwest of Penn State's main campus on route 45.

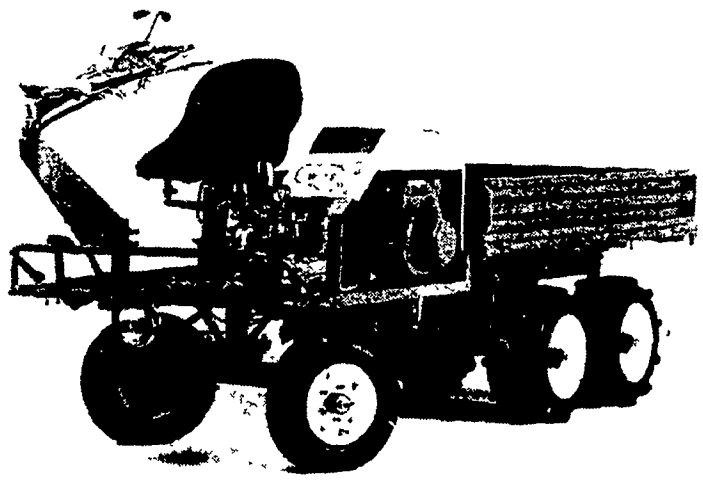
WHO'S THE WU? HONDA? YES



We realize that Ferarri, Ford & Frank Perdue did not become household words overnight. The WU comes to us with all the fine construction, mechanical practicality, and efficient maintenance record we've come to expect from the orient. It even comes with the time prove HONDA 6300 engine. For 8 years its been proving itself on the other side of the Pacific; now it's time the U.S. gets in on the WU experience.

To find out more about this versatile workhorse capable of carrying up to 1 ton payload an-8 hour day-on 2 gallons of gas. Write or Call:

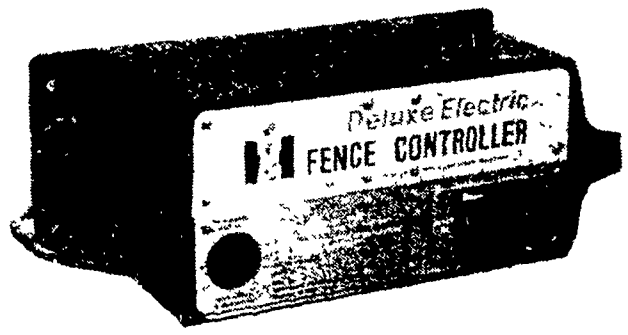
ELECTRIC FENCE

A SHOCKING DEAL - 25% OFF



DELUXE ELECTRIC MODEL

• This is a top-of-the-line fence controller. • Replaceable circuit boards and transformers. • Complete with built-in lightning arrestor and replaceable fuses. • Signal lamp indicates the strength of the shock on the fence line. The brighter the light, the stronger the shock. If the light is completely off, the line is shorted out. • Completely electronic-solid-state. • No moving parts. • Operates on 120 volts, 60 cycles AC. • Non-burning shock; approximately 55 shocks per minute. • Works extremely well on a heavily weed-grounded fence, even in wet weather. • Ground indicator light flashes if the controller is not adequately grounded. • Peak secondary current: 2 amps. • Peak secondary voltage: 12,000. • Size: 11½x7x5". • Net weight: 5 pounds. • U.L. listed. • Part number: 1131 918 R1.

Reg. $63.00 SALE $47.25

DELUXE PORTABLE MODEL

• This unit operates off a 6-volt battery. It has a battery compartment that will house a standard 6-volt "hot shot" battery. • Approximately 50 shocks per minute. • Shock duration 1/40 second. • Signal lamp shows the strength of the light, the brighter the light, the stronger the shock. If the light is completely off, the line is shorted out. • Peak secondary current: .4 amp. • Peak secondary voltage: 10,000. • Size: 11¼x8x6. • Net weight: 10 pounds. • U.L. listed. • Part number: 1131 921 R1.

WHY GAMBLE WITH COMBINE SERVICE?

WHEN YOU CAN CALL HOOBERS!

HOOBER'S SERVICE DEPARTMENTS ARE REPAIR CENTERS, NOT PARTS REPLACEMENT CENTERS. WHEN YOU CALL HOOBERS YOU GET:

1 EXPERIENCE - 3 Full-time mechanics work year-round on combines. With over 40 axial flow combines in the field our mechanics know how to set and repair combines.

2 EFFICIENCY - Our combine mechanics each drive fully equipped service trucks so that they can repair your combine on your farm while you wait.

IF A COMBINE REPAIR JOB TAKES NEW PARTS, HOOBERS PARTS DEPARTMENT HAS THE LARGEST INVENTORY OF COMBINE PARTS IN THE EAST.

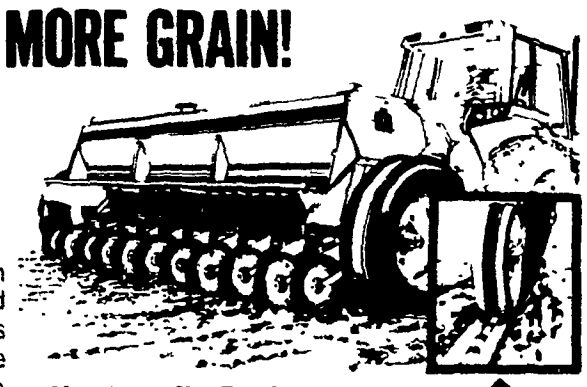
Drill With The International "5100 Special"

Outstanding accuracy begins with IH feed cups that deliver seed uniformly. Dual rib press wheels then compact the soil around the seed and gently "pat" the top to prevent air holes. Result uniform germination and emergence, a start toward higher yields.



The Key To Faster Emergence Is This IH Dual Rib Press Wheel

The ultimate finance rate.... 0%

If you've been holding off buying farm equipment until the finance rates come down, now's the time to make your move. From now until August 31, 1982, you can purchase any new Sperry New Holland combine, hay, forage or tillage equipment with a 12-month equal payment installment plan and pay absolutely no finance charges!

Sound great? It is. So come on in and we'll give you all the details. But make your move quick—we can't do this for long.

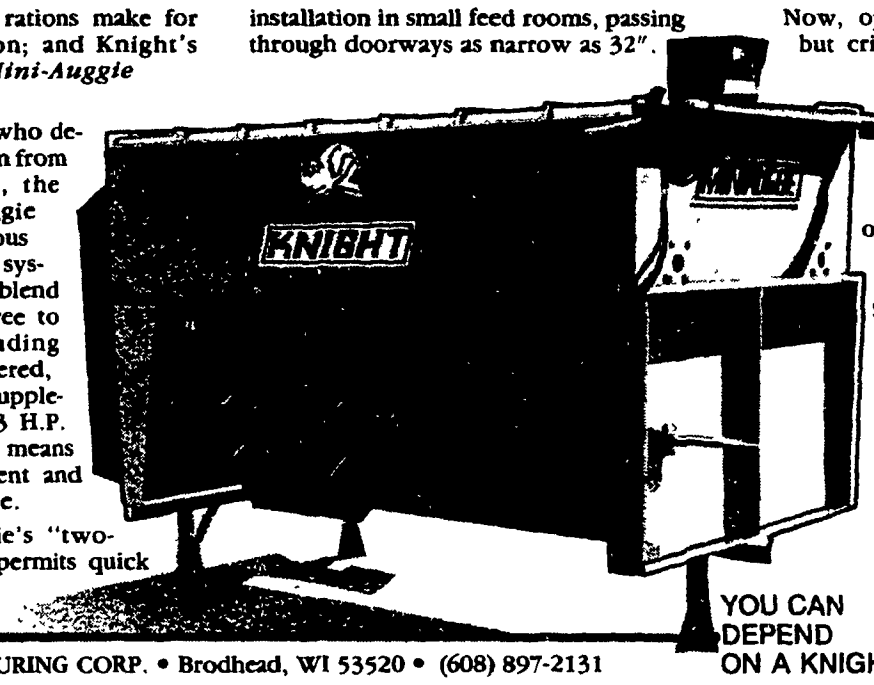
The "Mini-Auggie" from Knight

A perfect size blender/feeder for the smaller operation seeking perfection.

"Perfectly" blended rations make for increased production; and Knight's 102 cu. ft. new Mini-Auggie delivers perfection.

Sized for the farmer who demands high production from a small select herd, the stationary Mini-Auggie features Knight's famous three-auger blending system that can mix and blend an entire load in three to five minutes—including small quantity powdered, pelleted, or liquid supplements. The integral 3 H.P. gear motor drive unit means less power requirement and smoother performance.

And, the Mini-Auggie's "two-piece" construction permits quick installation in small feed rooms, passing through doorways as narrow as 32".



Now, operations with small but critical feeding requirements also can depend on a Knight—a Knight Mini-Auggie mixer/blender/feeder. For operations requiring other sizes, our entire line of Auggie units are available for stationary installation. See your Knight dealer for all the details.

New from Knight

MODEL 252 SPREADER

Known for quality, known for innovation, Knight introduces the new 252 Manure Spreader. Engineered and built for years of trouble-free dependable operation, the 252 has all the rugged features of its big brothers; the 350 and 410—making it the most rugged middle sized unit on the market.

2-SPEED APRON—A new enclosed two-speed apron drive unit with tapered roller bearing worm gear case and bronze worm gear is designed to provide a choice of speeds, jerk-free operation, and dependability for the life of the spreader.

ENLARGED DIAMETER BEATER—The new beater is larger in diameter and built much heavier providing a smoother spread of the toughest material.

No other 250 bushel spreader is built as rugged as the Knight Model #252. See your Knight dealer for the full story.

For uncompromised quality in spreaders, forage boxes and blenders, choose equipment manufactured with the perfect balance of time-honored craftsmanship and today's technological innovation. Choose Knight.

MODEL 410 SPREADER

The 410 hauls bigger loads (10 to 12 tons). Less trips, less energy, less wear and tear; that's why we built it.

Whether a tandem-axle tow type or truck mounted, the 410 is built with all the rugged features you've come to expect from Knight—like thick copper-bearing steel, bronze worm gear, tapered roller bearings, and much more. And, the special equipment options on the 410 make your spreading chores even more efficient.

MODEL 650 SPREADER

A giant step in manure spreading, the new Knight 650 Spreader will provide its worth after just one load. Big, brawny and powerfully built, the 650 is a must for those operations with big manure handling requirements. The 650 is constructed of heavy gauge steel with components to match its massive size; and the hydraulic apron drive will keep the material moving . . . fast.

Truck mounted for long distance hauling of large volumes, the 650 is for the operation where bigger is better.

See your Knight dealer for complete information.

— THANK YOU —

To ALL Farmers who took time out to attend our FIELD DAY at the John L. Landis Farm, East Petersburg, Pa.
We were very pleased with attendance and served lunch to over 300 people

THANKS AGAIN

If you missed the GEHL FIELD DAY, how about a GEHL DAY in your field?
GEHL has three harvesters to harvest your forage crops.
CB750 - The economy priced harvester with versatility, efficiency and capacity
CB100 - The highest capacity harvester with versatility to meet almost any acreage
CB1250 - THE HEAVY DUTY - The harvester that matches todays high horsepower tractors and large acreage.

Binkley and Hurst is ready to demonstrate to those interested in buying a new harvester.
All harvesters have features, but only GEHL has the "MAGNIFICENT SEVEN" - the features the competitors wish they had.

1. Tandem Axles
2. Water tank
3. Single station cutterbar Adjustment
4. One way, shear bolt protection
5. Overrunning clutches
6. Spinner Delivery System
7. Standard Axle Adjustment

CB750 - THE EYE OPENING FUEL SAVER

Come on over to Binkley and Hurst. We will be happy to show you these harvesters and their special features that will make your hay and corn harvest enjoyable.

Remember "your interests" and "your time" are "our specialty"

ROLL BALER SPECIALS AT OLD PRICES

NEW GEHL BALERS
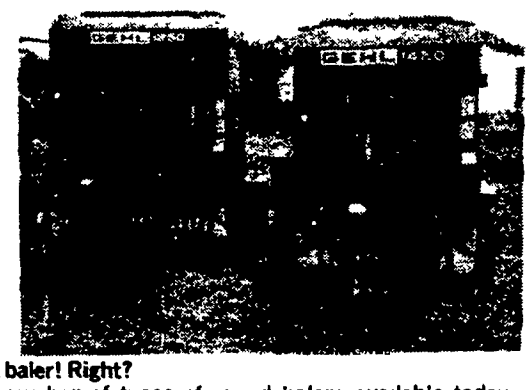
with T.D.C. - The Simple System



A round baler is a round baler! Right?

Wrong! There are a number of types of round balers available today. Some balers form soft center bales by simply packing and packing the crop 'till the bale rolls up. Some are belt balers that make very dense bales with tight core and wrap. And there are balers that use spikes and chains to form round bales. Only Gehl balers, with T.D.C. give total Total Density Control, total operator control over the type of bale he makes - small core, less dense, more dense, or anywhere in between.

Hydraulic twine wrapping mechanism, bale counter, make the size bale you can handle.

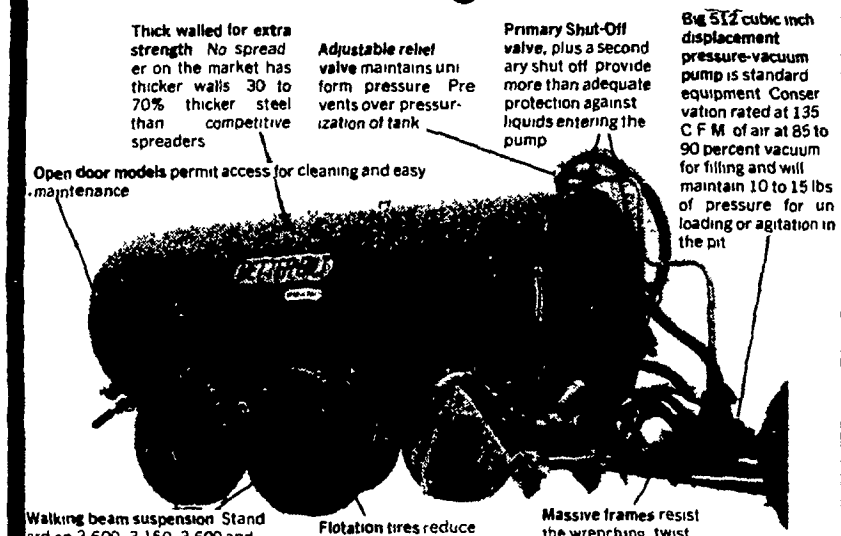
Outstanding Features



Thick walled for extra strength No spreader on the market has thicker walls 30 to 70% thicker steel than competitive spreaders
Adjustable relief valve maintains uniform pressure Prevents over pressurization of tank
Primary Shut-Off valve, plus a secondary shut off provide more than adequate protection against liquids entering the pump
Big 512 cubic inch displacement pressure-vacuum pump is standard equipment Conservation rated at 135 C F M of air at 85 to 90 percent vacuum for filling and will maintain 10 to 15 lbs of pressure for unloading or agitation in the pit
Open door models permit access for cleaning and easy maintenance
Walking beam suspension Standard on 2 600 3 150 3 600 and 4 600 gallon models (Optional on 1 500 & 2 100 gallon models) Front & rear wheels on each beam follow contour of the ground provides a smooth level ride
Flotation tires reduce soil compaction let you spread on soft ground early in season
Massive frames resist the wrenching, twisting jolting shocks of hard field usage year after year

Sizes - 800 gal. thru 4600 gal.

SPECIAL

1 - USED BETTER BILT 2600 Gallon VACUUM SPREADER w/Tandem Axle and 4" Suction Hose, Plow Down Attach.

Don't be fooled by lower prices on "will-fit" parts. The management of other brand dealerships recognize the value put into genuine Sperry New Holland parts and service. This is what made Sperry New Holland the leader and No. 1 in hay and forage equipment. When a problem arises or you need parts or service, call your authorized Sperry New Holland dealer.

The Vicon KM-240 cuts and conditions the tallest, tangled, wettest, heaviest, hay. This new mower-conditioner eliminates a pick-up reel, so you can put up more hay - FASTER. With a working width of 7'10", it can mow twice as much area in a day as most competitive models. Most competitors use a pick-up reel, which limits ground speed, adds maintenance problems and allows leaf loss.

The Vicon six-disc cutter bar feeds your crop directly, stem first, into rubber rollers that condition green hay or wet grass. It dries faster and bales easier, saving time and labor.

The KM-240 has no chains, no belts, no sickle bar. If you need only a mower, look at the Vicon CM-165 (4 discs-5½' working width) or the CM-240 6 discs-7'10" working width). Both make clean cuts in heavy grass or tangled crops.

GUNITE Silo Relining & Repairs

Extensive tests have been conducted on Gunite. Below are some of the properties of Gunite:

1. Excellent bonding
2. High Density
3. Extreme strength and hardness
4. High resistance to absorption

The excellent physical properties of the material are due to the water content being only the amount needed to satisfy chemical hydration.

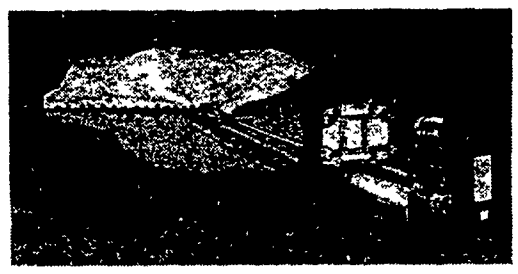
LAIDIG 43R



NOW YOU CAN UNLOAD WITH THE BEST
Shelled Or Ground Ear Corn

Storing high moisture grain can cause problems unless you have the right unloader. If you're bothered by high maintenance costs, poor feed delivery or a "free flow" system that fails, then you should consider the new Laidig 43R grain unloader.

It's designed for use in existing, oxygen-controlled storage units. And it can be installed in a single day WITHOUT ALTERATIONS TO YOUR STRUCTURE!

The Laidig 43R Power Sweep Auger replaces those Gravity Feed Sweep Augers. It's a heavy-duty machine engineered for day-in, day-out operation...the same high quality and peak performance that operators expect from a leader...from Laidig!

LAIDIG Best name in BOTTOM UNLOADERS 3 Year Warranty

43R IS A COMPLETE CONVERSION PACKAGE FOR OXYGEN-CONTROLLED GRAIN STRUCTURES.
For metal structures up to 20 in diameter

AGRICULTURAL SALES REPRESENTATIVE

We are looking for an individual who is currently working in an agricultural business with a "strong" ag background.

Join a company where the past June business sales volume has been the same as 1981, which was one of the best! Forecast for the balance of 1982 is to exceed 1981 near-record sales!

Our product is a 'big ticket' item that lessens production costs of a farmer. Income potential is $35,000 plus. Territory would be Berks, Lancaster and Chester County areas. Inquiries are treated confidentially.

10,000 hogs put Farmix on trial.

After 3 years of feeding trials with 10,000 hogs, Farmix concentrate was proved superior on all counts: swine performance, carcass leanness, and cost of gain. Farmix from Master Mix Research produces pork at a lower feed cost because it's based on the Available Amino Acid concept—a concept that goes beyond the simple measurement of protein levels used by most feed manufacturers. Come in. Ask us how this crumblized ration is ideal for all swine. When you weigh the evidence, you'll want to give Farmix a fair trial in your operations.

Kellys call Spring Lane Farm "home"

BY PATTY GROSS
Staff Correspondent

SINKING VALLEY — Spring Lane Farm, nestled in northern Blair County, sends an inviting message to passersby. With its long, winding lane leading to a large, friendly farmhouse, the Tom Kelly dairy farm joins its owner in sending out a heart-felt welcome to all who happen past.

Friends and visitors are urged many times by the Kelly family to stop and visit. The 235-acre Hosltein farm is known for cooperating with area groups to help further the industry. The most recent outing to the R1 Tyrone farm was for the Central Pennsylvania Junior Judging School.

On the agenda: lemonade and watermelon served under the large shade trees. However, life on Spring Lane Farm isn't all play, as the students soon discovered. The Kellys brought out some of their best registered Holsteins for the young farmers to evaluate.

Tom believes farming is excellent for young people and he wants to do all he can to help. "It's difficult to start from scratch, which is basically what we did," he confessed. "I'm glad we started when we did."

"You've got to like it, to do it. There are many long work hours involved." He's a farmer who is sure of what he wants out of life for himself, his family and his farm. However that conclusion comes after testing the waters elsewhere.

Some would say Tom is a farmer who has tried many things and has been many places. When he graduated from Penn State, he took a county agent position in Blair County. After 3½ years he left the county to become a fieldman for the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

Although he enjoyed what he was doing at the time, Tom said he knew it wasn't permanent. He proved that five years later, when he changed jobs again. As a young man, he spent the next two years as a district manager with Curtis Breeding Service, and for 5 years following that position, managed the livestock shows at the Farm Show Building for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

"Different times I thought maybe I should be farming because I was raised on a farm in Southwest Pennsylvania," continued Tom. "We always had lots of work and I wasn't sure I wanted to continue that way."

"It's permanent now," he smiled. "I didn't know what I was to do, but God made it clear that I was definitely a farmer."

Tom is the first to admit that becoming a farmer is easier said than done. He and his wife, Peg, had no family farm to take over. Initial attempts at finding a place suitable for the Kelly family failed. But the deeply religious farmer said God led them to the picturesque farm and made the land available to them.

The native of Eighty Four, Washington County, doesn't regret the many jobs he held before taking up farming. Tom chalks them up to good experience.

Spring Lane Farm began with one barn and 27 cows. Today is has grown to a 140-head herd. In 1974 when the Kellys moved back to Blair County and began farming, they added 2 silos, a heifer barn, a bulk feeder and 32 more stalls onto the 72-foot dairy barn. Just recently the family expanded the farmhouse, giving Peg a larger kitchen and Tom an office.

The 65 milking cows produce a herd average of over 19,000 pounds. Tom said they are working on strengthening the herd even more. For the past three years the farm has been participating in the embryo transfer program. In about a month the group will start to calve. He hopes to see the value of his herd increase as they produce better animals.

Milk production is most important to the Kellys, however Tom claimed his registered Holsteins are worth much more because of their showing records. He attributed the farm's survival to selling excellent breeding stock. It would have been difficult, he said, to stay in business if they had depended entirely on the milk check.

The Kellys aren't loyal to one bull. They try to learn as much as they can about the different bulls and select them on that basis.

The show-oriented farm is continually preparing for the next event. Holsteins from Spring Lane Farm are regulars at the Morrison Cove Dairy Show in Martinsburg, Hosltein Championship Show in Huntingdon, the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show and the 4-H district and state competitions.

Three of the Kelly children, Brian, 17, Susanne, 15, and Miriam-9, are active showmen. The two younger children, 6-year-old Rebecca and John David, 3, are still too young to be working on the farm.

Miriam is new to the 4-H scene, but the two older children are recognized as outstanding achievers. Two years ago, Brian, and this year, Susanne, won Pennsylvania Distinquished Junior Member in the state Holstein Association's Junior Division. They also are representatives on the Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association's Executive Committee.

The Tyrone Area School District students take after their father when it comes to organization memberships. The director of the Blair County Holstein Club and the Blair County Farmers' Association chairman of the Grassroots Committee for Penn State and is involved in Penn State dairy organizations.

Peg, a Blair County native, also graduated from Penn State, making the Kellys strong supporters of the University. They were surprised, but now pleased that Brian selected Virginia Tech. He will leave the farm in the fall to major in dairy science.

Most of the time the Kelly family can be found at home, because they decided eight years ago that Spring Lane Farm is "home". A farm, where they belong.

Spring Lane Farm in northern Blair County has an inviting look to it. Tom and Peg Kelly. They are known for welcoming groups to their farm to promote the ag industry.

Tom and Peg Kelly with their youngest daughter, Rebecca, are old hands at farming. The Kellys were both raised on farms, but did not decide they were "farmers" until 1974 when they purchased over 200 acres in Blair County.

Kelly, left, discusses farming with two students from Virginia Tech: Tim Gano and Keith Long, right. Tom, a strong supporter of Penn State Agriculture Programs, says his son will be joining the visitors this fall as a Dairy Science student in Virginia.

It's milking time at Spring Lane Farm, R.D. 1 Tyrone. The herd has grown from 27, when Tom Kelly began farming in 1974, to a present size of 140. The 65 cows milking produce a herd average of over 19,000 lb.

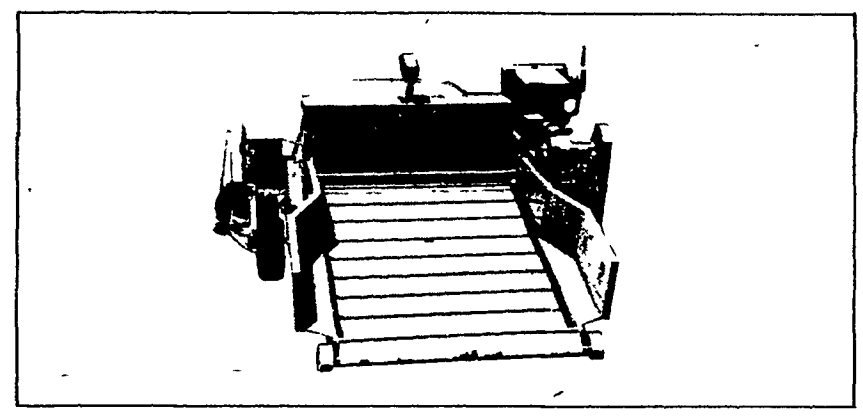
The Storage System for the future. Here Now!

THE AG-BAG SYSTEM



MORE FEED. MORE STORAGE. MORE HIGH QUALITY TDN & PROTEIN.

Select from three models of AG-BAG Machines. Motorized, Hydraulic, and Gear-Driven. AG-BAG lets you match the machine to your job. Big or small. Whether you're DAIRY or BEEF AG-BAG will store More For Less. The AG-BAG System. Air-tight storage with more versatility than any other system. Just look at these AG-BAG ADVANTAGES:

1. UNLIMITED oxygen-limiting storage
2. Storage for ALL forages & grain
3. Transportable
4. Easy to use and little maintenance
5. NO dangerous silo gases
6. Silo fires WON'T occur
7. Higher moisture forage
8. NO unloader to break down
9. Extra income and potential from custom bagging
10. THE Forage System for the 80's

JUST LISTEN TO WHAT THESE AG-BAG BELIEVERS HAVE TO SAY:

Kenneth Popham of Floresville, Texas

Kenneth runs a 465 cow Dairy and said this about AG-BAG: "At today's interest rates you can't afford any other type of storage Even with the yearly cost of bags it's still inexpensive storage .. a whole lot cheaper than building barns and hiring help I put up 13 bags last year and after seeing the results, I'll put up 25 bags this year The bags are a good thing."

Don Carter of Parkdale, Oregon

"The best move I ever made" ... says Don Carter in reference to his switch to bagging silage on his dairy near Parkdale, Oregon

"I get 18% more feed from the same acreage and the feed lasts three times as long. I used to clean my bunks after three days, now I only need to clean them after 10 days."

Roland Rasmussen of Blair, Nebraska

Roland farms 350 acres west of Blair, Nebraska, and fattens about 650 cattle from 600 lbs to finish.

"By labeling every bag as to date and kind of feed, I can mix my feeds and eliminate the guess work in making a ration I feed alfalfa silage, corn silage and ground ear corn stored exclusively in the bags, purchasing only my minerals and vitamin supplements"

"The AG-BAG system has enabled me to increase carrying capacity per acre at a reduced cost of gain"

Bert Anderson of Sceptre, Saskatchewan

"At least 30% more feed . I can guarantee at least that" says rancher, Bert Anderson, of Sceptre, Saskatchewan

"I've been able to cut my grain feeding costs in half since converting to the bagging. It's just like feeding grass I've also eliminated the need for a liquid supplement that we always fed before going to the AG-BAG System .."

HERE'S WHAT THE AG-BAG SYSTEM CAN DO FOR YOU

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

All eggs in one basket

The farm economy is in rough shape. There's no doubt about that. Just how bad seems to be the question. Attitudes among farmers range from hopeful optimism to downright depression. And among farm policymakers and administrators, confusion reigns.

A recent report from the Farm Credit System indicates that farmers aren't paying their debts quite as well as in the past, but they're not doing all that bad. It may be too soon for that particular indicator to judge how well farmers are doing. At least there is a hint that the farm economy is hurting.

The 1982 crops are in the ground, so there's not much farmers can do at this point except wait and hope for good weather and better prices. They've already decided that many of their crops aren't going to make money this year. It's more a matter of how much they're going to lose.

Western wheat growers are quoting a study just released that shows them losing $3 a bushel on their entire crop this year. And a report out of Washington says that although 1982 crops will be smaller than last year, the total will still be larger than what is actually needed and will simply add to the buildup. Too much last year, a little more added this year, and you can see where crop prices are headed.

So what are the alternatives for the farmers who have the land and the equipment and the crops already in the ground? There really aren't very many. Some belt-tightening can still be done, some deferred spending, some refinancing, perhaps even an early decision to sell out before foreclosure comes. And the other alternative — that one which most farmers will choose — simply wait and see what happens.

It's probably not a good time for any farmer, but it's a better time for those who have been at it a while and who have not been too ambitious in their efforts. It's also a better time for those farmers who are diversified. Maybe that flies in the face of modern thinking, but year in and year out those farmers with some diversification in their output have weathered a little better.

It's an unusual year when all of the major feed and food crops are down in price at the same time. Granted, we're in that situation now, but it shouldn't last too long and it shouldn't happen again soon. It's also unusual when the various livestock commodities are down in price at the same time.

So the farmer who grows some corn and soybeans and milks some cows and keeps a few pigs and has a broiler house, might be able to hang on. Whereas the corn and soybean farmer, unless he has something to fall back on, is going to be looking at a pretty thin paycheck this year. Perhaps it's old-fashioned to talk about diversification - to caution farmers about putting all of their eggs in one or two baskets. But year in and year out it's proven to be good advice. Back in the old days, a farmer wouldn't dream of a one or two-crop enterprise. Today, it's rather common to see a grower with nothing but corn and soybeans, and with no thought of tending any livestock.

There was a concept back in the old days that said crops and livestock go together. That a farmer does best when he grows feed crops for his own livestock and markets the livestock rather than the crops. In those days, farmers milked a few cows, kept a few sows, even grazed some steers. They kept laying hens and sold eggs, and in some parts of the country even raised some sheep. A busy, productive, well-managed diversified farm in those days was something to see. There was work to be done year-round from dawn till dusk, and there were commodities to sell whenever money was needed.

Corn could be fed to the livestock and the excess stored for sale at the best time. The barn loft would be full of baled hay that could be fed or marketed. A milk check came in every month, eggs went to town every week, wool could be sold once a year, and there was work for everybody. The kids tended the young stock, worked in the garden, helped out in the fields when needed, and learned about farming.

Farmers worked toward a balanced program of production. Enough feed for the livestock with something left over in case of a bad year, and something to sell for cash when it was needed. A large garden provided family food needs and beef, pork, poultry and mutton produced on the farm was standard table fare.

But a diversified farm is a complicated mechanism. It requries constant attention, a wide range of skills, and unquestioned devotion from the entire family. Besides that, much of it can't be mechanized. And that's why so many farmers throughout the country have sold off their livestock, plowed up their pastures, and are growing corn and soybeans, wheat and sorghum, and a few other crops that can be tended from the air-conditioned comfort of a four-wheel drive tractor.

That seems to be the trend in agriculture these days — huge automated cropping units, pig factories, giant feedlots, and whole farms devoted to broiler or egg production. There are still some diversified farms in places where the ground is too rough for large equipment or the farmer is too stubborn to give up the old ways. For the most part, these folks are still doing pretty well in a time of agricultural adversity.

If there's a lesson anywhere in what can be seen in today's agricultural dilemma, it's the matter of farmers being too good at what they do. Their specialization and automation has rendered them more productive than they really need to be. As a result, many of them are paying the price.

Whether there will be more farm foreclosures next winter than we've seen over the past few winters remains to be seen. There are plenty of folks predicting just that. In the meantime, most farmers remain hopefully optimistic.

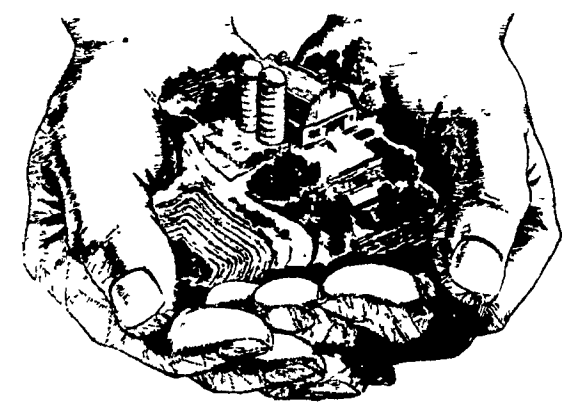
PUT YOUR FARM IN FERTRELL HANDS



Fertrell is a biological plant food scientifically formulated to provide "Time-Released" nutrients for your crops throughout the entire growing period. Fertrell plant foods are a unique combination of naturally occurring rock powders and tankages which feed both plants and soil micro-organisms. All ingredients in Fertrell blends are scientifically combined for maximum compatibility and effective breakdown throughout the growing season. Fertrell cropping programs are designed to overcome specific problems and directed at the nutrient needs of that specific crop. Fertrell is a complete "Specialty" plant food providing all the essentail elements necessary for high yield crop production.

We're a results oriented company providing sensible soil management programs and products to farmers who want to abandon unprofitable chemical practices. Fertrell specializes in tillage and rotation programs, soil analysis service and transitional soil corrective programs that work.

Cloned calves bring $47,000 before birth

FORT COLLINS, Co. — A pair of unborn Simmental calves, "cloned" at Colorado State University, recently brought $47,000 at a Kentucky cattle auction.

The calves, to be born next year, were brought by Claus von Franzius of Schwartz Creek, Mich., during a sale at Mt. Brilliant Farm in Fayette County, Ky.

"As far as we know, this is the first sale of its kind, but there probably will be a lot more," said Dr. George Seidel, a CSU researcher who helped develop the cloning process. "People would prefer to buy two good animals instead of one."

Seidel said von Franzius actually will have his choice of three pairs of calves now implanted in six recipient cows. The cows have been staying at CSU's Animal Reproduction Laboratory embryo transfer unit, where they were impregnated. They will be shipped to Kentucky and the calves will be born at Mt. Brilliant.

Each recipient cow is pregnant with half of an embryo, produced through a process developed by Seidel, Dr. Peter Elsden and Dr. Timothy Williams. The process involves artificially inseminating a donor cow, collecting an embryo non-surgically, microsurgically splitting the embryo and then placing the two halves into one or two recipient cows.

The result is artifically produced identical twins (technically clones, individuals with the same genetic material).

The first pair of identical twin heifers produced by the CSU process was born May 18. Since then several other sets have been born; several dozen more are gestating.

The calves auctioned in Kentucky are out of Lacombe Achilles 261A and Caroline. Achilles, who belongs to Mt. Brilliant owner Mike Molloy, has sired 40,000 registered offspring via frozen semen and artificial insemination.

Molloy has cooperated extensively in CSU embryo transfer research. He housed Achilles at CSU until this spring, when the 13-year-old bull was retired and returned to Kentucky.

Molloy auctioned off the unborn twins during one of his annual cattle sales. The pair brought the highest price of any lot sold that day.

Bidding began at $10,000, climbed to $25,000, stalled at $29,000, jumped to $40,000 and ended with von Franzius' bid, according to local reports.

Pa. fruit production up

HARRISBURG — Based on July 1 conditions, Pennsylvania farmers will produce more apples, peaches, pears, sweet cherries and rye than last year while producing less oats, barley and wheat, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. They will produce the same quantity of tart cherries.

Pennsylvania's commercial apple crop this year is forecast at 570 million pounds, up 43 percent from 400 million pounds last year. Peach production is expected to total 80 million pounds, up 23 percent from a year ago.

The sweet cherry crop is estimated at 700 tons, up 133 percent from last year's short crop. Tart cherry production is forecast at 8.0 million pounds the same as the 1981 crop. Pear production is estimated at 4,500 tons, up 50 percent.

Winter wheat production is estimated at 8.0 million bushels, down 18 percent from a year ago with 228,000 acres for harvest compared with 270,000 last year.

The oats crop at 19.1 million bushels is down five percent from a year ago with 335,000 acres for harvest compared with 345,000 in 1981. Barley production is 3.6 million bushels is down 12 percent. Acreage for harvest decreased from 76,000 acres in 1981 to 72,000 acres for 1982.

Rye production is expected to total 396,000 bushels this year compared with 363,000 last year with 12,000 acres for harvest compared with 11,000 acres last year.

Mow faster, up to 10 mph, without plugging. Through wet, heavy grass or down tangled crops. The toughest conditions you face won't stop Gehl's new disc mowers and dis mower conditioners.

High Impact cutting. High speed, heavy duty discs spin at 3,000 rpm; each disc has three reversible, low cost knives. This prevents plugging found with conventional, sickle-type machines in difficult cutting conditions.

Minimize costly maintenance. Gehl's solid, simple design means more productive time, more profit for you!

Choice of three machines. Disc mowers include a 5'6" model 140 and 7'10" model 160. The disc mower conditioner is a 7'10" model 1080. It features rubber rolls that gently crack the stems at uniform intervals. Saves leaves and nutrients. Adjustable shields let you choose full width swaths or tall, fluffy windrows

See for yourself how these tough machines cut through almost any crop so you get more done in less time. Visit your Gehl dealer today.

DeKalb, Pfizer merge seed units

DEKALB, Il. — AgResearch, Inc. and Pfizer Inc. announced today they have formed a joint venture, DeKalb-Pfizer Genetics, for the conduct of their combines seed businesses.

The joint-venture company, owned 70% by DeKalb and 30% by Pfizer, will be headquartered in DeKalb, IL, and will offer an extensive line of agricultural seeds, including hybrids of corn, sorghum and sunflower seeds and proprietary soybean and alfalfa seeds.

DeKalb-Pfizer Genetics will combine the seed research, marketing and other operations of the two companies. The joint venture will also have access to all seed applications from the molecular-biological research conducted at Pfizer's Groton, Ct., Central Research facilities.

The new partnership takes effect immediately, with former dealers for both DeKalb and Pfizer Genetics now able to offer the full seed product lines to their customers.

No other changes have been made or are being contemplated for the parent company, DeKalb AgResearch, Inc.

Mike Holmes, general manager of DeKalb's poultry marketing and operations, said, "Our fiscal year closing on August 31, will be a very successful one for DeKalb's Poultry Division. This continued success reinforces DeKalb's commitment to its poultry breeding business."

DeKalb AgResearch, Inc. has been actively involved in egg-type layer breeding since 1944 and is the only primary breeder in the United States that continues in the hands of its originators.

Martin builds economical methane generator

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

IONA — A Lebanon County firm has brought on-farm production of electricity with methane gas from manure much closer within the economical grasp of average-sized farming operations.

The Leonard Martin Co., manufacturers of Maxi-Power generating systems, has completed a 15KW generator for a dairy operation in New York State, which is approximately one-fifth the normal cost of a unit of that size.

"We feel the generating portion of a methane system is now more economical and cost-effective for interested farmers," Martin explained.

"This is a motor-type generator and the 15KW unit, including the control panel, costs $12,000, which is about one-fifth of the price of a standard generator and parallel system."

The 15KW system would be sized for approximately a 50-cow dairy operation. It would also be suitable for a 200-sow hog operation or a 50,000-bird poultry operation.

The parallel system, which ties the generator into the electrical grid of a utility, is a lot less expensive, according to Martin.

The unit is equipped with a squirrel cage-type motor, which acts as the generator.

"The motor features power factor correction, which corrects the efficiency of the generator so that it blends better with the power company," Martin said.

Another feature of the unit is its low RPM engine, a Waukesha, which operates at about 1,000 RPM. This should provide about three times the lifetime of a standard automotive gasoline engine.

The unit also contains an electronic governor for very close speed tolerance and a step-up gear box to get the generator up to speed.

"This is the first generator of this type from this area and the first we feel is cost-effective," Martin said.

"There have been motor-type generators operating off windmills, but this is the first I've seen off an engine."

The unit is equipped to operate off methane or LP gas and will automatically switch between the Codatron installation on Chester Weaver farm, Newville, by Westfalia Systemat includes central control center with keyboard and printer, which provides daily feeding information.

Westfalia reports area dairy installations and open house

EDINBORO — Increasing installation of the latest developments in dairy management systems, including an open house near Edinboro on Thursday, are reported by area respresentatives of Westfalia Systemat.

The varied Westfalia installations reported by sales engineers Bob Turner and Tom Moore include new milking parlors with automatic take-offs, computerized Codatron feeding systems and the backflush system.

The open house is planned from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday at the Burton and Richard Warnshuis farm, located one mile north of Edinboro. A new milk house and pump room, built by the owners, includes a trigon parlor with 18 Westfalia automatic take-offs and Clay air-operated stalls.

The milking equipment was installed by Albert Brenner, of Spartansburg.

The Warnshuis operation includes a herd of 240, with 140 milking. Also available for viewing during the open house are a new manure handling system with a two million gallon storage capacity and a heifer barn.

A Codatron feeding system has been in operation since spring on the Chester Weaver farm, near Newville, Cumberland County. The recent renovation also features a new trigon parlor and milk house.

The Weaver Codatron system includes three feeding stalls in the tree stall barn. The Weaver herd numbers some 60 milkers, half registered and half grade.

The facilities were installed by Cumberland Farm and Dairy Supply, Inc., Chambersburg.

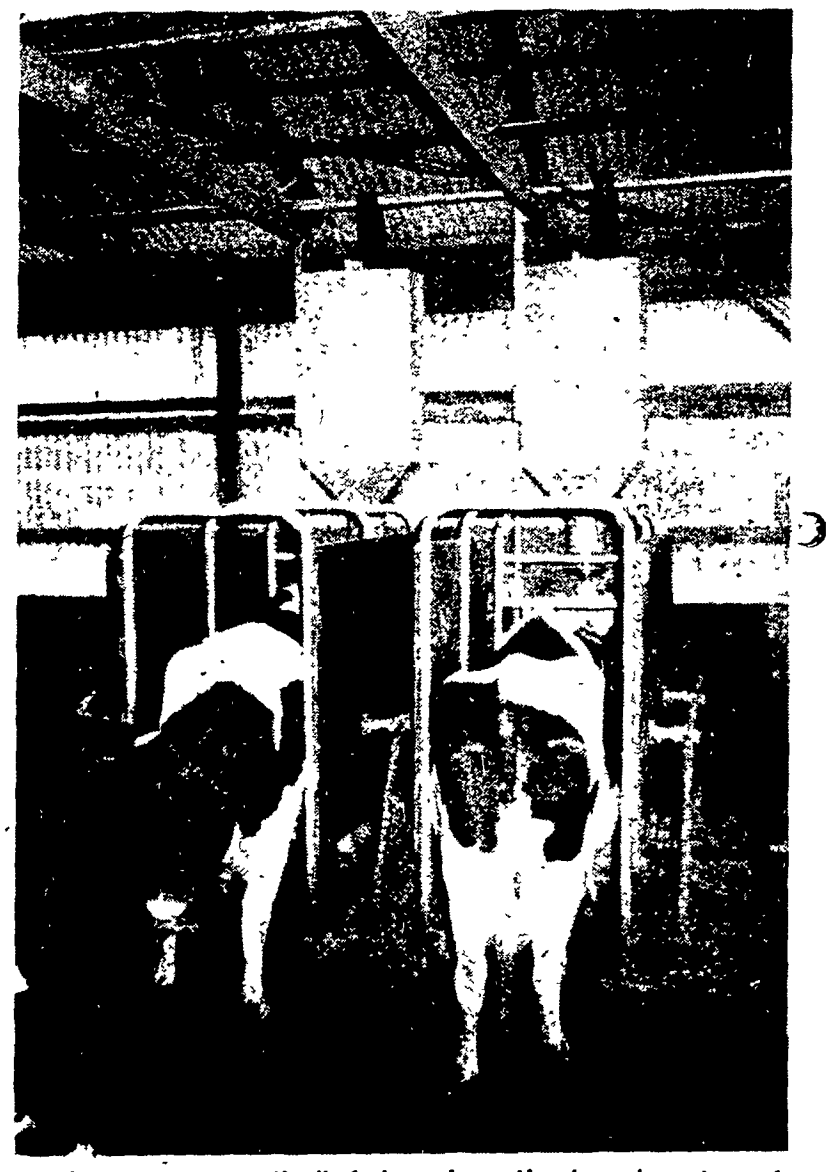
Other Codatron installations recently were made on the farms of George and Keith Bancroft, of Centerville, Crawford County; and Dave Jarrett, of Jersey Shore. The Jarrett installation includes four feeding stalls, two for high production group and two for the low production group.

The first Westfalia backflush system in the East was installed on the Norman Laffey farm, Cochranville, by Robert L. Janney Farm Construction and Equipment, Cochranville.

The Laffey operation totals some 600 head, with a milking string of 340.

The backflush system was installed to combat a mastitis problem that was affecting a dozen or so cows a day during the past winter, according to Janney.

"The family reports there is no current problem with mastitis," Janney said.



Cows are automatically fed precise ration based on stage of production in Westfalia feeding stalls.

"The somatic cell count has dropped from 65,000 to about 15,000 – the lowest it has ever been."

Another backflush system has been installed on the Tri-D Farms, of Arnold Dailey, Inwood, W. Va., by the Equipment Division of Dairymen, Inc., Sykesville, Md.

The Codatron computerized system features the automatic feeding based on nutrition requirements during the four basic phases of production during the lactation cycle. The system will also be equipped to accomodate other computerized programs, such as breeding and milk management.

The backflush system provides for fully automated sanitizing to reduce bacterial concentrations in the milking cluster and inflation. The system with its eight-phase cleansing cycle can be adapted to both automatic take-offs and regular pipeline milkers.

The parallel system also automatically sends power into the utility grid when excess electricity is being produced on the farm and draws power from the grid during times it may be needed.

"The generator is now no longer the major factor in a methane system," Martin said.

"While other improvements will likely come, the basic bugs are now out of the generator and it is cost effective for the farmer.

"What is needed now is more research and development by colleges and universities on the methane portion of the system to guarantee a continuous supply of gas."

The Leonard Martin Co., 330 Fonderwhite Road, manufacturers primary and standby generating systems not only for farms, but for mining operations, saw mills and for export.

A number of units are being built for the Middle East and being shipped to countries such as Egypt. The Martin Co. builds units up to 1,000KW capacity.

Leonard Martin, of Iona, Lebanon County, is shown with 15 KW generating unit which his company has built for dairy operation in New York state. The generator, which can be operated off methane or LP gas, features a squirrel cage-type motor, which helps to make it cost effective for agricultural operations.

Seed industry honors Ditmer

HERSHEY — The state's seed industry honored a pioneer among its own ranks last week and heard a prediction that it will be forced in the near future to participate in the hedging market to meet competition.

Honored by the Pennsylvania Seedmen's Association at its annual summer meeting on Friday, July 16, was Wendell P. Ditmer, who is among the charter members of the organization formed in 1950. Ditmer retired last week as chief of the Botany and Seed Division in the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

The forecast concerning participation in the hedging market came from Dave Poorbaugh, of Poorbaugh Grain, Lancaster, who spoke to the group on "Grain Commodities and Futures."

In a resolution citing Ditmer, the Seedsmen said, in part:

"As Chief of the Botany and Seed Division, Wendell has exercised great care and concern for the interests of the consumers of Pennsylvania. He has, at the same time, given of himself in an effort to create a compatible trading environment for the members of the seed industry."

In addition, an album containing 60 letters from friends in the seed industry and representatives of state and federal governmental agencies was presented to Ditmer.

"As members of the state's seed industry, you will be forced by competition from the Midwest and the West to begin using the hedging market in the next five years," Poorbaugh told the association.

"It is already being done in these other sections of the country.

"In hedging, you use the future's market to lock-in a predetermined profit and take the risk out of the seed you're buying from your farmers."

Poorbaugh urged the seedsmen to find a hedging broker, to start keeping records on the cash and future's markets and to become a student of the market to prepare for the time coming when they will be forced into hedging.

"But don't mix speculating in the market with hedging," he warned.

Poorbaugh outlined several examples to the group on how hedging in the future's market could be used to guarantee a certain profit level in dealings with farmers in the purchase of seed.

He also outlined for the group the major factors he watches and studies to keep abreast of possible trends in the market. These included U.S. and world grain supply and demand, politics and government policy, interest rates, the value of the dollar and the weather.

He outlined the latest crop figures just out from the USDA, but warned that due to budgetary cuts they are just a mathematical guess and the first actual field survey will not be out until the next report.

On the world scene, Poorbaugh said that China is a total question mark and that Russia is in very, very bad shape. He expects that Russia will increase purchases from the U.S., but pointed to the $1 billion in credit that Canada has extended to the Soviets for wheat purchases. - DA

Larvadex gets Pa. label

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Larvadex, a Ciba-Geigy larvicide mixed into the feed of laying hens to control flies that breed in poultry-house waste, has been registered in nine more states.

Section 18 label approvals from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) were sought by agriculture departments in Alabama, Florida, Maine, Massachusetts, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Utah.

Bert Honsch, Larvadex product manager for Ciba-Geigy, says it controls larvae of houseflies, soldier flies, and lesser houseflies. He says the larvicide does not harm the hens or eggs as it passes through the birds into waste pits where the flies breed.

Larvadex now can be used in 17 states. The others are Arkansas, Connecticut, Georgia, Indiana, Maryland, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia.

"Such high interest stems from the larvicide's convenient application method and effectiveness in breaking the fly-life cycle," Honsch says. "It works like this: one pound of Larvadex premix is blended into each ton of complete feed. It starts to work a few days after the larvicide drops into the waste pits. By 7-10 days no more adult flies emerge. The entire adult fly population declines in another 10 days."

Honsch recommends that the season-long-feeding program be started as soon as flies become a nuisance.

Metric in farm machinery inevitable, says Deere manager

HERSHEY — "The change to metric is inevitable," announced John A. Conrads, manager of Technical Service for Deere and Company of Moline, Illinois. Conrads was addressing a group of state agricultural marketing officials here at the Convention Center on Monday.

Speaking for Deere, Conrads described the conversion of farm machinery from the American standard measure to metric as an "evolutionary process," necessary in order for the United States to remain competitive in the international marketplace.

Deere introduced a complete moldboard plow line that is all metric three years ago, said Conrads. The only thing that isn't metric, he smiled, is the tail wheel.

Changing over to the metric measure has not cost Deere any additional money, reported Conrads, who qualified his statement by pointing out the switch to metric was done at the same time the model was redesigned and retooled.

What about the cost to the farmer? According to Conrads, the only expense a farmer might have is about $100 for a new set of tools. Chuckling, he added most farmers already have "metric" crescent wrenches.

Are there any cost savings as a result of metric measure in farm machinery? Conrads said "yes," citing a $380,000 saving on combines realized by Deere when they converted to metric sheet metal in constructing the grain gobblers. Because of the metric sheet metal's thickness and size, Conrads reported there was less waste.

Along with plows and combines, Deere is incorporating metrics into its 955 cubic inch diesel V-8 engine, used in large tractors and earth-moving equipment.

Presently, Deere has what Conrads termed "dual capability" in 90 percent of its farm machinery and in 90 percent of its factories. Conrads explained dual capability means the ability to change from American standard measure to metric "by flipping a switch" — a machine is manufactured with both inch and metric dimensions.

When will Deere take the plunge and throw away its old thirteen-sixteenths socket wrenches forever? "Only when it becomes reasonable, both in time and cost," answered Conrads.

Deere is not the only farm machinery company heading toward metrics, said Conrads, adding most of the major competition is making comparable changes. "All the international companies are hurting staying with the inch system," he said.

Conrads explained that although 75 percent of Deere's machinery sales are within the boundaries of North America, 25 percent are in the world market. These foreign sales, which demand metric machinery, represent $1½ billion which would be lost if the change to metric wasn't made.

Conrads stressed the European Economic Community already has threatened to enforce old laws that stipulate no non-metric products can be imported into its member countries.

Speaking from experience, Conrads added U.S. companies must learn to "do what the market wants." He referred to the $150 million lost by Deere before the company learned to make the type of tractor the European market wanted.

"Companies can't afford to wait," Conrads concluded.

Deere's John Conrads claims metrics is "inevitable" for farm machinery manufacturers if they want to remain competitive in the world marketplace. He was speaking to the National Agricultural Marketing Officials in Hershey on Monday.

Knight bull to Select Sires

PLAIN CITY, Oh. — Woodbine Ellas Incredible-ET, a young bull bred by George III, Paul, Cynthia & James Knight, Airville, has been chosen to enter Select Sires Program for Genetic Advancement (PGA) sire sampling system.

Based on his outstanding pedigree, this bull calf has been designated a Super Sampler and his semen is now available to all Holstein breeders. Incredible is one of very few Holstein bulls from throughout the United States to be selected as a Super Sampler in 1982.

Northcroft Ella Elevation is the world-famous dam of Incredible. An "Elevation" daughter, she is scored Excellent (97-2E), and Excellent on mammary. Along with being named All-American and All Canadian Aged Cow in 1981, she has several records over 32,000 of milk and 1,100 of fat. Her best record was made at five years, nine months with 44,143 of milk, 1,696 of fat in 365 days. Ella has an index of +2,968 of milk and +112 of fat.

Incredible was bred to have a concentration of "Elevation" blood. His sire is an "Elevation" son, Marsfield Elevation Tony. Mars is the "Elevation" son that Select feels will compliment Ella most.

USDA gives meat, poultry processors more flexibility

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Effective Aug. 6, meat and poultry processors will have increased flexibility in the placement of official establishment numbers on their products.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture assigns the establishment number to help federal and public health officials indentify the source of products, said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service. "The new regulation will also make it less confusing for consumers to find the establishment number on the product," he said.

"Current requirements differ considerably for various meat and poultry products," Houston said. "The revision will assure identical, simplified requirements for all processors."

Under the action, meat and poultry operators will have four options for the placement of an official establishment number:

—Within the official inspection mark;

—Outside the inspection mark but elsewhere on the exterior of the container or its labeling — for example, the lid of a can;

—Off the exterior of the container, when a statement of its location in printed contiguous to the official inspection mark — for example, "EST. No. on Metal Clip," or "EST. No. on Pan."

—On an insert label placed under a transparent covering, if clearly visible and legible and accompanied by the prefix "EST."

"Previously, the regulations generally required the establishment number on meat products to be part of the USDA inspection mark which must be on the label," Houston said. "However, poultry regulations permitted the establishment number to be omitted from the inspection mark if it was in close proximity to the inspection mark and clearly visible on the exterior of the container."

On canned products, the meat inspection regulations required the establishment number to be on both the lid of the can and the label, while the poultry regulations allowed the use of the number on either the can lid or the label.

On July 28, 1981, USDA published a proposed regulation to eliminate the inconsistencies between the meat and poultry inspection regulations. USDA received 11 comments on that proposal from meat and poultry processors and trade associations, generally supporting the proposal.

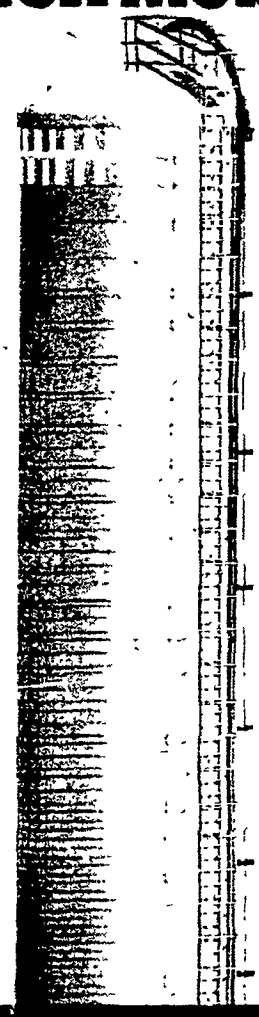
THERE'S NO BETTER WAY TO HANDLE HIGH MOISTURE CORN.

AND WE CAN PROVE IT TO YOU.

The many benefits of high moisture corn are all well known these days: No dryer costs, reduced shrinkage, less labor, less grain damage, fewer field losses, fewer bad weather problems—and a great feed!

And the only way to process high-moisture corn most effectively is with a Madison Grain-O-Matic.® Here's why:

The light gray color of the Vibra-Cor® staves reflect direct sun ray heat 2½ times better than the dark color used by others! These thicker truss-beam design staves also provide superior insulation value.



Thus gases in the Grain-O-Matic® structure expand and contract much less than in a steel structure. Inside pressure is regulated by a precision vacuum and pressure valve. Every structure is air-pressure tested by experienced Madison crews. Result: Better feed and no breather bags, so you can fill clear to the top of the structure with nutrition packed high-moisture grain. And you also get the Madison/Laidig bottom unloader that provides fast, positive delivery day after day for a long, long time.

Yorlets joins VMD writers

PALMYRA — A new face has joined the writers of our "Ask the VMD" column. The new veterinarian who will be answering farmers' animal health questions is Donald L. Yorlets, VMD. He relaces Dr. Synthea Maas and Dr. Tim Trayer.

A native Pennsylvanian, Dr. Yorlets hails from a Cumberland County dairy farm. His parents, John C. and Dorothy S. Yorlets, continue to milk 45 head of Holsteins on their 250-acre farm near Mechanicsburg.

Yorlets, who is single and currently resides near Hershey, has been working with the Valley Animal Hospital veterinary staff since last June. He was a May 1981 graduate of the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine, New Bolton Center

During his veterinary school years, Yorlets says he placed major emphasis on animal nutrition and reproduction. His specialty, he says, is dairy cattle, although he also enjoys his horse and small animal clientele.

Recently, Dr. Yorlets says he's been seeing an increasing number of cows suffering from mastitis. This, he explains, is due to the rainy weather and muddy barnyards. To avoid continued cases of mastitis, Yorlets recommends keeping the cows as clean and dry as possible.

During his "free" time, Yorlets says he enjoys playing racquetball, fishing and hunting. With a laugh, he admits, "I like them more than I do them."

Although he specializes in cattle, Yorlets says he also enjoys his work with small animals and horses. Here he gives a peeping poodle the "once over" as its owner concentrates on keeping a firm grip on the canine client.

Some Reasons For Using a Liner -
1. Eliminate runoff
2. Wetter silage packs tighter
3. Tighter packed silage makes more Lactic acid
4. Lactic acid inceases the D.T.N.
5. Reduces shrinkage
6. Does not heat
7. Does not freeze
8. Does not spoil in hot weather
9. More digestable protein
10. Acid does not eat silo walls
11. The same amount of acres feed more cattle
12. You don't need an additive
13. Can be installed by one person

"GO"-POWER WITH SAME

*BIG SAVINGS on FUEL
SAME's air cooled direct injection diesel engines operate at higher temp. to wring maximum power from every drop of fuel Their superiority in fuel efficiency has been proven in competitive field demonstrations, in official tests*, and especially by farmers in everyday working conditions On the-farm fuel savings of up to 40% are commonly reported
*Details on request
The higher fuel prices go . the greater the advantages of owning a SAME!

*BIG SAVINGS thru BETTER TRACTION
SAME's unique integral 4WD system and weight distribution make SAME perform as a balanced 4WD unit . not as a 2WD with optional add on power to front wheels SAME 4WD outworks 2WD in dry, soft or wet soils More "go" power, not "slip"-power. 4WD increases drawbar power for 15% to 24% more acres worked per hour on the same amount of fuel
BIG SAVINGS in tires, time and fuel

*BIG SAVINGS on MAINTENANCE COSTS
SAME diesel engines are famous for dependable, trouble free service . . a result of unexcelled engineering and quality control in manufacture. Ease of service, long life interchangeable parts and elimination of liquid cooling equipment slashes maintenance costs and down-time keeps SAME on the job

*BIG SAVINGS on INITIAL COST
SAME includes many, many features as standard that are extra cost options (if available) on other makes This, plus our excellent dealer back up and warranty, are additional reasons why farmers by the hundreds are switching and saving big with SAME.

Ask the VMD

Leon Riegel — Donald Yorlets — Edgar Sheaffer

A reader asks:

What are the signs of nitrate poisoning in cattle? Is it a seasonal problem? Is there any prevention or treament?

Dr. Yorlets replies:

Nitrate poisoning in cattle is usually caused by the ingestion of forages, weeds, fertilizer or water which contain a high nitrate content. The signs of acute nitrate poisoning are usually evident within 4 hours after ingestion.

These signs classically are characterized by difficulty breathing (usually open-mouth breathing), cyanotic (purple) mucous membranes, rapid heart rate, weak pulse, generalized weakness, along with an uncoordinated gait. Pregnant animals frequently abort. There is a characteristic chocolate discoloration of the blood. In severe cases death usually occurs within 12-24 hours. The animal frequently dies in convulsions.

Death is due to the nitrate compound interfering with the blood's oxygen carrying capacity, causing death by suffocation. Confirmation of the cause of death can be made by laboratory analysis of stomach contents, blood urine, forages, or water for nitrate compounds. It should be noted that nitrate poisoning is unrelated to urea poisoning.

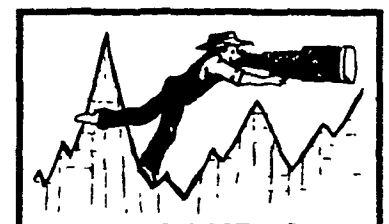
Nitrate poisoning can occur at any time of the year; however, it is more likely to occur at certain seasons. During the spring planting season, Ammonium Nitrate and Potassium Nitrate fertilizers are available and can cause nitrate poisoning if ingested.

Also runoff from fertilized fields can contaminate drinking water resulting in nitrate poisoning. In the spring, immature green oats, barley, wheat, and rye hay, and sudan grass, corn or sorghum fodder may contain high nitrate levels. The plant nitrate content is largely influenced by soil conditions: high soil nitrate content, acid soil, drought followed by moist soil conditions, and deceased light all favor accumulation of nitrates in forages.

In the fall of the year, runoff from silos is very high in nitrate compounds. Harvesting of Sudan grasses after frosting can result in Cyanide poisoning which, although completely unrelated can be confused with nitrate poisoning.

The risk of nitrate poisoning can be reduced by feeding high energy feeds along with nitrate containing forages. Ensiling nitrate forages is beneficial in reducing their nitrate content. the addition of Chlortetracycline at the rate of 15 mg/pound of feed is helpful for approximately two weeks.

Nitrate poisoning is treated by the intravenous injection of methylene blue at the rate of 10 mg/pound body weight for cattle. Mineral oil drenches are helpful in counteracting local irritation of the stomach as a result of the ingestion of these caustic compounds.



BROCK GRAIN BINS

Models and sizes to fit any grain storage needs

The satisfaction that comes from doing a good job of farming

Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range. A good pasture with a pH of 6 5 or higher, for example, will make 300 to 400 lbs of beef per acre and produce up to $100 gross income per acre This means with the help of lime, profits from pastures can compare favorably with feed or grain crops

For feed & weed applications ...nothing works like URAN®

It's the extra margin of quality URAN has over other nitrogen solutions Features like low free ammonia and a near neutral pH They assure a better feed & weed application Better compatibility with most herbicides And often better herbicide performance – especially under dry weather conditions

A URAN feed & weed application gets two important jobs done in one money-saving trip It not only saves time, fuel, manpower and equipment, but means one less soil-compacting trip over your field

URAN has no pressure or volatile ammonia to worry about It can be sprayed, dribbled, flown on soil or crop residues, injected subsurface or applied through irrigation water And it gives you both fast-acting and long-lasting nitrogen response

Don't accept imitations See us for the real thing – genuine Golden URAN

SCS chief to speak at annual meeting

ANKENY, Iowa — Peter Myers, chief of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service, has been added to the program for the 37th annual meeting of the Soil Conservation Society of America, Aug. 8-11, 1982, in New Orleans, Louisiana.

Myers, who was named chief of the USDA agency in April, will participate in a panel discussion, "The politics of Making Conservation Happen," on Wednesday morning, Aug. 11. Myers will speak about the future of federal programs in land and water conservation.

Other participants in the panel discussion include Merilyn Reeves, natural resources coordinator for the U.S. League of Women Voters, Washington, D.C.; Don Collins, director of product development for the Monsanto Corporation Authority, Down-Kenneth G. Higgs, director of the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority, Downsview, Ontario; and Dennis Le Master, chairman of the Department of Forestry and Range Management at Washington State University in Pullman.

The general theme of the meeting is "The Politics of Conservation." More than 700 conservationists from the United States and Canada are expected to attend. Headquarters for the event will be the New Orleans Marriott Hotel.

BEACON MINERAL SUPPLEMENTS

who needs them? You do!

Quality roughage alone can provide much of the protein and energy needed for milk production. But since roughages may lack both balance and quantity of minerals necessary for maximum milk production, bone and muscle development, and the most efficient utilization of other nutrients—many dairymen need a mineral supplement program.

How can you tell if you need a mineral supplement program?

Let us make a free analysis of your forage crops. We'll give you a report on the nutrient value of your hay, silage, or other roughages, along with recommendations for any supplements—if necessary. We won't try to sell you anything you don't need!

Our three mineral mixes—Beacon Phos-Min, Beacon Mineral Ade and Beacon Cal-Min—are formulated by highly respected dairy nutrition specialists. The supplement they recommend will contain the necessary minerals to make up deficiencies or imbalance in your roughages and to achieve the proper calcium-phosphorus ratio in your total feeding program.

You can rest assured that you aren't paying extra for exotic ingredients, high transportation cost, and expensive promotion and sales cost.

With BEACON, you get more mineral units per dollar invested.

Mineral supplements, formulated especially for the cow at reasonable cost, are part of what we call "No nonsense feeding".

We couldn't make a refrigerated cow, so we did the next best thing.

We built the Kube Kooler. It reduces cooling and water heating costs and pre-cools the milk to help preserve quality.

And it does it all in less space—just a 22" cube. Making the Kube Kooler ideal for dairymen with small milkrooms.

Installation is easy, too. Suspended from the ceiling or wall-mounted.

And long life? Built right in. With durable, corrosion resistant copper and stainless steel. No moving parts. No gaskets.

So while we can't build you a cooler cow, we can do everything possible to make your dairy operation more efficient.

HIGH PERFORMANCE POWER & HYDRAULICS

Case 2390/2590 tractors

If you're looking for big power, big comfort and big productivity, try a Case 2390 or 2590. The 2590 has 180 hp* (134 kW), the 2390 has 160 hp* (119 kW). Both come with Case sound suppressed Silent Guardian cab . . . and Case CON TROL pressure and flow compensated closed center hydraulic system that does just about everything you want hydraulics to do. If you're thinking about a new tractor, think about a new 2390 or 2590 . and the kind of trading we're doing now

Swine health topic of symposium

DES MOINES, Ia. — "Swine Health" is the focus of the 1982 NPPC Production Symposium Aug. 3-4 in Des Moines, Iowa. The event will be held at the Des Moines Hyatt House and is sponsored by the National Pork Producers Council.

All areas of swine health from specific diseases to vaccination to the closed-herd concept will be covered by recognized authorities in these fields.

Advance registrations are now being taken and offer a substantial savings over the on-site registration fee. Registration before July 12 is $65, after that, registration is $80. The fee includes lunch on Aug. 3, the banquet, coffee breaks, proceedings, notebook, meeting rooms, and speaker expenses.

A complete program, registration materials, and hotel reservations are available from the National Pork Producers Council, P.O.Box 10383, Des Moines, Iowa 50306. Phone 515/223-2600 for more information.

USDA extends "cleanup" comment period

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has extended the comment period on a proposal dealing with reimbursement for certain tasks performed by meat and poultry inspectors until Aug. 5.

Under the proposal, the time USDA meat and poultry inspectors spend for taks such as knife sharpening, clothes changing and cleanup — up to 15 minutes a day — would be counted as part of the eight-hour inspection day provided to meat and poultry plants at government expense.

USDA was to accept comments on the May 7 proposal until July 6. On June 24, the National Broiler Council asked USDA for additional time to study the proposal and submit comments.

40 — REGISTERED HOLSTEINS — 40
30 — MATURE FEMALES — 30

This herd reflects the great influence of Romandale Reflection Marquis. It exhibits tremendous depth of cow families, three families total over 30 members. In all, there are daughters of five different Excellent cows selling.

THE KINGPIN SALLY FAMILY

Twelve descendants of Windymount Kingpin Sally (EX) sell...11 females and 1 young bull.

The foundation is by Kingpin with records to over 23,000m 900f. Among her daughters selling is Flango Marquis King Supreme (EX-92 EX-MS) with 5.9 17,488 4.2% 740. Supreme is due in September to Milu Betty Ivanhoe Chief. The young bull selling is her Valiant son.

Supreme and her VG-87 Molly Chief were 1st daughter-dam at the 1981 Central PA Championship Show. The Molly Chief sells due in June to Browndale Sire Christopher.

THE BONNIE FAMILY

Allendairy Rich B Bonnie (EX EX-MS) 6-7 286d 3.4% 533 is the brood cow behind the Bonnie family. She is by Lockway Rich Ivanhoe and is due in November to Plushanski Persuader.

Bonnie sells along with three daughters, 2 granddaughters and 2 great-granddaughters. The outstanding members of the family include a GP-83 Glendell who is a strong candidate for high VG.

Also selling is the Glendell's 2-year-old Marvex daughter who looks to be an exceptional show prospect. She sells with her tall, strong, April 27, Triple Threat daughter.

THE BLOSSOM FAMILY

Jaomis Barrie Blossom (VG) 5-6 305d 15,096 3.8% 569 is the fountainhead of the Blossom Family. She has an EX MArquis maternal sister. Their Dam was VG by Posch Sovereign Ivanhoe with over 20,000m.

The many outstanding members of the Blossom Family include four daughters by Dutchoe, Matt Tippy, Woodbine Pearl Comet and Conductor.

BERKS COUNTY SALE

Sale facilities behind Fairgrounds Mall just off Route 222 east of Reading, Pa. (Old Reading Fairgrounds).

THURSDAY NIGHT, JULY 29, 1982
7:30 P.M.

49 HEAD OF REGISTERED HOLSTEINS SELLING

Sired by the best the breed has to offer; Elevation, Astronaut, Bootmaker, Persuader, Marvex, Creek, Betty Chief, Jet Stream, Conductor, Jerry and others.

39 bred and just-fresh heifers

Bred for Production

20 from dams with records from 19,000M to 33,000M

12 from dams with records from 800F to 1153F

These cattle have been carefully selected from among the best that Berks County and surrounding area breeders have to offer. They are sired by popular sires and from consistently high producing cow families. Past Berks County sales have provided an opportunity to buy good cattle and develop them as witnessed by these three from previous sales:

1977 - Gettell Jill - EX 2-10, 365, 22,758, 11. 1978 - Plushanski Persuader Rosalind - EX 92, 3-8, 296, 23,699, 3.7, 868. 1980 - Secret Valley Persuader Tammy - VG 88, 3-9, 365, 26,972, 4.9, 1325
